VOL. LXXX—NO. 33. WILMINGTON, SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1906. WHOLE NUMBER 12115.

OUTLINES.

Senator Tillman expresses surprise that the Chicago negroes talked of preventing him from discussing the race question; he says he will lecture on the "Annexation of Cuba" and it is so interwoven with the negro problem that it will be impossible for him to avoid.——Yale yesterday defeated Harvard at football by a score of 6 to 0, the victory giving Yale the championship of the country.——One killed and eight injured are the casulties in the automobile races at Philadelphia. ——At Charlottesville. Va., yesterday the conference on secondary education took a strong stand in favor of teaching agriculture in secondary schools. ——The libel suit against Lolus Emery, lately fusion candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, was withdrawn yesterday by State Senator McNichol, whom he charged with bribery.——Yesterday at Danville, Va., the largest tobacco market in the world, the record sale of three million pounds of leaf was made; five thousand farmers attending in their wagons.——At Minneapolis yesterday, the American Federation of Labor re-elected Samuel Gompers president and issued its declaration of principles, among other things favoring woman's suffrage, municipal ownership of public utilities, government ownership of telegraphs and telephones, free text books in the schools and making other demands affecting labor.——A wireless message from the battleship Louisiana yesterday evening indicated that President Roosevelt was 530 miles northward of Panama homeward bound.——At Hamilton, Ontario, last night, scores were injured and street cars smashed in a fight between soldiers, police and street car men——New York markets: Money on call, nominal. no loans, time loans very dull and strong; spot cotton ten points higher, firm at 11.20; flour quiet and steady; wheat steady, No. 2 red, 80 1-4 elevator; corn, steady, No. 2, 54 elevator; oats steady, mixed 39; turpentine quiet 70 to 71 1-2; rosin steady, strained common to good, $4.25

President Roosevelt promised the Porto Ricans citizenship. This is another Democratic idea that he is about to swipe.

Mrs. Platt, who recently separated from Senator Platt, says he should resign. In so saying she furnishes more ground for further disagreement between the ill-matched couple.

Some writer is advocating "a scientific system of training girls to be wives." Married men should be careful how they agree that there is a necessity for that.

"There will be three women in heaven for every man" declares a Western minister. He is probably basing his conjecture on the proportion of the sex who attend church.

An esteemed contemporary notes a similarity between Roosevelt and Tillman. Tillman, however, needn't get ruffled as he has the first claim on similarity. He started it first.

Signor Caruso, the famous Tenor, probably thinks it queer that a New York magistrate should fine him $10 for monkeying around the monkey house in Central Park.

At the Florida State Fair the other day Democrats cheered Vice Prisident Fairbanks and told him they were for him for President. He would prefer to hear Republicans in Indiana, Ohio and other Northern states making a noise like that.

Says the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot: "Senator Depew confesses that during his months of seclusion form the madding crowd he has been writing the memoirs of his own career." Does he write to vindicate himself or give us the benefit of a horrible example.

Senator Beveridge and other Republicans are laying more store than ever by the inter-state commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. They imagine they see in it no end of powers and privileges which the State surrendered to the Federal scheme—without wnowing.

Wright Bros., of Dayton O., are keeping their invention of an air ship from being written up in the papers. They claim that they have at last settled the problem of navigating the air and do not want their secret to get out. Judging from the way the inventors talk, they are monarchs of hot air.

FIRED ON A FARMER

Sensational Affair in Catawba County Involving Former Wilmington Church Pastor

REV. J. J. PAYSEUR USED GUN

Discharged Both Barrels at Man Who Sought to Drive Him Off His Hunting Grounds—Quarrel Preceded It

Many people in this city, where he was formerly pastor of Brooklyn Baptist Church, and at Atkinson, where until a year or two ago he conducted a very flourishing high school, will read with interest the following dispatch from Newton, N. C., with reference to Rev. J. J. Payseur, who is well known in this section:

Newton, Nov. 23.—As the result of a quarrel which followed upon his having forbidden Rev. J. J. Payseur to hunt upon his lands, Mr. Ezell Burke, a Catawba county farmer, was shot in the face by Mr. Payseur to-day, receiving both barrels of a shot gun in his face. His wounds are serious but are not considered fatal.

The incident which resulted so seriously occurred this afternoon about 4 o'clock near Maiden, a small town about 10 miles from Newton and half way between Newton and Lincolnton. Mr. Payseur, according to information received here to-night, was hunting upon Mr. Burke's lands when the latter gentleman appeared and lodged a protest. Hot words followed this. Then it was, so the story runs, that Mr. Payseur raised his gun and fired both barrels at Mr. Burke, who received the loads in his face. Medical aid was procured as soon as possible and the wounds of the injured man dressed.

The trial of Mr. Payseur, it is understood, will be held to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock, presumably at Maiden.

Mr. Payseur is a Baptist minister and was until recently the principal of South Fork Institute, a high school This school is not running this fall. Mr. Payseur was principal of Matthews schools in Mecklenburg county about eight years ago and is known in that section. Subsequently he taught in the eastern part of the State, returning later to the west. He is married. Both men are about 30 years of age.

Back From the Farm.

Former Policeman Frank George, who has been farming the past year in Pender county, has sold his place and removed, with his family, back to Wilmington. He wil probably go on the force again. He says that it was impossible to farm without labor and none of it was to be had in the vicinity of his place. He got disgusted trying to get anything done and has come back to Wilmington to stay.

Eastern Carolina Roads File Their Agreement With Secretary of Secretary of State in Raleigh—Norfolk Man Shot is Dead.

(By Sou. Bell Long Distance 'Phone)

Raleigh, N. C., Nov., 24.—J. E. Dempsey, of Norfolk, Va., who was shot at the union station here by Nightwatchman R. B. Parrish Tuesday night, died this afternoon as a result of his injuries. Dempsey left a statement stating that the shooting was accidental although there are eye-witnesses who say that Parrish shortly before the shooting was heard to say "Watch me scare that tramp." For this reason, Parrish is held without bond until there is an investigation of the affair. The body of Dempsey has been sent to his home at Norfolk.

The agreement of consolidation between the Norfolk & Southern, Virginia and Carolina Coast, A. & N. C., and Raleigh and Pamlico railroads was filed today with the Secretary of State, the capital stock being placed at 25,000,000, of which five million is in preferred stock and twenty million is in common stock. The system will embrace 633 miles of road in Eastern Carolina and Virginia. The Norfolk and Southern extends from Norfolk to Bellhaven and Mackey's Ferry to Washington, besides branch lines, 223 miles. The Virginia and Carolina Coast extends from Suffolk to Edenton and from Buckford Junction to Elizabeth City, 73 miles. The A. & N. C. extends from Goldsboro to Morehead City, 95 miles, with 17 miles from Newbern to Bayboro. Raleigh and Pamlico from Raleigh 22 miles to Wendell and will be extended 110 miles to Neuse Junction with branch lines from Farmville to Snow Hill 12 miles.

HANDSOME NEW STORE.

Messrs. W. J. Penny & Co. Have Most Attractive Front Street Store.

The large and handsome store in the new Vollers building, No. 28 South Front street, one of the largest and most handsomely appointed in Wilmington, has just been occupied by Messrs. W. J. Penny & Co., and without a doubt they have one of the most up-to-date establishments hereabouts. On the first floor there is an area of 6,000 square feet and in this large building the firm has consolidated the stores formerly conducted on Market street and on Front and Dock streets, besides adding a number of new lines and a new stock that is second to none in the city, embracing clothing, gents' furnishings, dry goods, hats, caps, boots, shoes, etc. In fact it is a big department store of its lines where the needs of most everybody can be supplied.

The store is handsomely fitted up, well ventilated and lighted and there is an opportunity for the display of goods that is both satisfactory to the proprietors and advantageous to the customers. Ample facilities are provided in the rear for receiving and shipping by freight.

Messrs. E. N. and George W. Penny compose the firm, which is 26 years old and has its record well established for honest dealing and the best of goods. A visit to the store will well repay the visitor. for it is refreshing to see the evidences of progress and enterprise in any line.

Funeral of Mr. Ellis.

Impresive funeral services were conducted yesterday morning from the late residence, No. 204 Castle street, over the remains of the late Mr. D. E. Ellis, whose death was announced in Saturday's paper. The services were conducted by Rev. A. McCullen, pastor of Fifth Street M. E. church, and a number of friends were present to pay a last sad mark of respect to the venerable man whom they had known so well and favorably in life. The pall-bearers were Messrs. R. V. Leonard, Geo. S. Boylan, J. F. Baggett and W. K. Bell.

Teachers' Association.

The New Hanover County Teachers' Association held an interesting and profitable session in this city yesterday morning. Several timely papers were read according to the programme previously announced and the teachers heard a very interesting address from Prof. Catlett, the County Superintendent. The attendance upon the meeting was very good indeed. The indications are that North Carolina Day will be very generally celebrated.

TRAGEDY IN COUNTRY

Five-Year-Old Son of Masonboro Trucker Killed By His Little Brother.

GUN ACCIDENTALLY FIRED

Children Playing in House While Parents Were Out—Part of Young Boy's Head Blown Off by Discharge of Heavy Load.

A distressing tragedy, the killing of a five year old boy by his little brother, two years his senior, occurred yesterday morning about 10 o'clock on the Styne plantation, about four miles from Wilmington, on the Federal Point road, in Masonboro township. The killing resulted from the accidental discharge of a shot gun, heavily loaded, one side of the little victim's head being blown almost from his shoulders.

The tragedy occurred at the home of Mr. Clarke, a trucker on the plantation, who early in the morning had gone off on the farm some distance from the house. His wife had gone in the yard to attend to some household affairs while the two little boys, Marvin Dewey, aged five years and six months, and Winslow Clark, his brother, seven years old, were playing on the inside. Innocently they went into a bedroom of the home and seeing their father's gun behind the bed, attempted to get it out. The older boy was pulling it out from what appeared to the father, a place of safety, when it went off accidentally and the entire load took effect, carrying away the lower part of the little brother's face, the neck and part of the shoulder. The gun went off at close range and the body of the child in a pool of its own blood on the floor was a distressing spectacle. As soon as the gun went off and the older boy saw what had been done, he was grieved beoynd words and rushed screaming to his mother in the yard. She ran in and was horrified at the accident. The father was summoned as soon as possible and the coroner, Dr. Bell, in this city, was notified. Dr. Bell viewed the remains but no inquest was necessary under the painful circumstances. The older of the two brothers is distressed and refuses to be comforted while the mother is prostrated with grief.

Funeral Director Walter E. Yopp prepared the remains for burial and they will be taken to the former home of the family in Bladen county for interment. The grief stricken parents have the sympathy of very many in the great bereavement that is theirs.

GEORGE W. PHILLIPS KILLED.

Well Known Young Man Meets Tragic Death at Norfolk.

Friends and relatives in this city yesterday received the distressing intelligence of the tragic death of Mr. George W. Phillips, a young man well known and highly esteemed here. Mr. Phillips was a fireman on the Seaboard Air Line and as he was crossing the yards in Portsmouth his foot caught in the frog of a switch and before he could extricate himself a shifting engine passed over his body, mangling him fearfully. Mr. Phillips was a brother of Mr. Gilbert Phillips, who was employed at the Wrightsville Beach last summer. He was also a first cousin of Messrs. R. L. Sellers, R. J. Sellers, Charles D. and Plummer Gilbert and V. M. Gilbert, all of this city. The young man is survived in Portsmouth by his mother, Mrs. W. M. Capps, and one sister, Mrs. Allie Hughes, former residents of this city. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of many friends in their sorrow over the young man's death.

Special Sales for the Holidays.

With the advent of the Holidays the Wilmington branch of the Southern Distilling Company is inaugurating again its special sales on Mondays and Tuesdays, the offerings including the finest whiskies and wines at reduced rates. In a large advertisement elsewhere in today's paper some of the goods and prices are given. The company carries the largest stock of any family liquor store in the state and when you call for a special brand you don't get "something just as good."

Many of the Illinois farmers who have been here prospecting for several days, have been guests of the Only Restaurant and express themselves highly pleased with the good cheer and polite attention found at "The Only."

FLOTILLA IS COMING

Letter Received From Commander Anderson by Mayor Waddell Yesterday—Left League Island Navy Yard Bound South on Friday.

The Second Torpedo Flotilla, under command of Lieutenant Commander Edwin A. Anderson, a former Wilmingtonian, is expected to call here to-day or to-morrow on its way South. A leter to Mayor A. M. Waddell from Commander Anderson yesterday stated that the flotilla had left League Island, Pa., and would probably reach here about the 25th, remaining about 48 hours. It is not known whether the flotilla will coal here or not, but but it is certain that it will call at the port. Local coal dealers who submitted proposals last week have not been advised of the acceptance of their bids and no arrangements have been made for the fleet to take supplies here but it is said that there will be no trouble about coaling even if notice is not given until the boats arrive.

Peculiar interest attaches to the visit of these little fighters of the navy because of the fact that Lieut. Anderson received his original appointment to the Naval Academy at Anapolis from Mayor Waddell while he was in Congress years ago and it will be especially pleasant for Col. Waddell upon this occasion as mayor of the city to extend the hospitality of the port to the commanding officer upon his arrival with the flotilla.

Nothing was heard from the fleet yesterday but the boats are supposed to have stopped at Norfolk and will proceed down the coast with all possible speed. The flotilla was expected in Hampton Roads yesterday, but it was not known whether it would come to the navy yard there or not.

PUBLIC LIBRARY OPENING.

Formal Exercises by Sorosis Next Friday Evening.

The formal exercises of turning over to the city the library recently donated by the North Carolina Sorosis will take place in the library rooms at the City Hall on Friday evening of this week. The books will be formally tendered by a representative of Sorosis and the acceptance in behalf of the city will be by Mayor Waddell. Kneissel's orchestra has been engaged to furnish music for the occasion and there will be other features of and interesting and pleasing character. The exercises will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock and the public of Wilmington is most cordially invited. Refreshments will be served by young ladies dressed in costume to represent some of the standard books in the large collection and from a spectacular point of view theis will be one of the prettiest attractions.

ELKS' MEMORIAL NEXT SUNDAY.

Arrangements for Elaborate Service by Wilmington Lodge No. 532.

All the arrangements are about completed for the elaborate and very appropriate memorial services next Sunday afternoon in the Academy of Music by the Wilmington lodge of Elks. As previously announced, Captain William F. Robertson will deliver the address upon the occasion and this will be supplemented by the beautiful ritualistic work of the order and a programme of vocal and instrumental music. The annual offering for the poor of the community will be received. The full programme of exercises for the afternoon will be announced by the committee in a few days. Exalted Ruler Kingsbury will preside at the service.

FOUR CARLOADS OF LETTUCE

East Wilmington Growers Had Busy Time of it Yesterday.

Four solid refrigerator cars of lettuce was shipped from East Wilmington to the Northern markets yesterday, being the largest this Fall. This was in addition to a large amount that is going forward daily by Southern Express where the schedules permit. Three of the four cars yesterday were from the fine farm of Mr. D. N. Chadwick and the other large shippers during the day were Messrs. William E. Springer, D. F. Klein and W. H. Mills & Son. The prices are very satisfactory having ruled during the past week from $2 to $2.50 per basket.

INLAND WATER WAY

Second Annual Meeting of Association in This City on Tuesday Morning.

CALL ISSUED YESTERDAY

Great Project Will be Considered at Important Meeting This Week—Congressman Small and Other Distinguished Visitors Coming.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—A call was issued to-day for the second annual meeting of The Inland Waterway Association to be held in Wilmington Tuesday. The meeting which will be held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning. The object of this Association is to promote the construction of the proposed inland waterway from Norfolk, Va. to Beaufort, N. C. This Association was organized at Columbia, S. C., several years ago and is composed of representatives from the commercial organizations in the states of Maryland, Virginia, and North and South Carolina and Georgia. The meeting next Tuesday will be represented by delegates from the commercial organizations of a number of cities, among others being Baltimore, Norfolk, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Newbern, Elizabeth City, Beaufort and Washington N. C.; Georgetown, Charleston, Columbia and Savannah. Several Senators and a number of representatives who have taken quite an interest in the project have signified their intention of being present.

The primary facts which will make this waterway so essential and emphasizes its importance are well known. It will afford a protected interior route from Chesapeake Bay to Beaufort Inlet, N. C., avoiding the perils of navigation around Cape Hatteras and Cape Lookout. It will promote the coastwise trade between the North and the South, affording transportation for waterborne traffic at the cheapest possible rates. The claim is made that none of the trunk railroads of the South are opposed to this project for the reason that it would tend to develop the section tributary to them and would relieve the railroads from congestion of that class of traffic upon which they receive the least revenue.

All arrangements have been made by the Chamber of Commerce for the meeting of the Association in this city day after to-morrow. Hon. John H. Small, who is at the head of the project, has written the president, Mr. James H. Chadbourn, of this city, that he will arrive to-morrow night to assist with the arrangements for the meeting. The Chamber of Commerce has already appointed delegates to the meeting of the Association, but the entire membership of the body will be welcome. The discussions will be interesting and profitable to all business men and it is hoped to have a large attendance. The programme of the meeting will be announced upon the arrival of Mr. Small. There will be several interesting addresses by Mr. Small and others.

COTTON ASSOCIATION.

Splendid Work Being Done Throughout the State Just Now.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Hamlet, N. C., Nov. 24.—This week there have been good meetings of the county cotton associations at Monroe, Wadesboro and Lumberton. Farmers are much interested in the plan for the cotton company with capital of one hundred million dollars to be used in buying cotton when price is below cost of production. The farmers are more and more becoming acquainted with the commercial value of cotton and it is full evidence that they do not now hurry their product to market on declining prices as was the case before the cotton association was organized.

The movement has been a great educator to both the business and the farming interests of the South.

There will be county meetings next week onn Monday 26th at Laurinburg; Tuesday 27th at Fayetteville; Wednesday 28th, at Dunn; Thursday 29th at Kinston and Saturday, December 1 at Greenville, N. C.

Special Sale Monday and Tuesday only. One quart of Green River whiskey $1.00. Regular price $1.25. Southern Distilling Co. **

WORTH MILLIONS IN THE LONG RUN.

The Star is pleased to acknowledge receipt of the fourth annual report of the Audobon Society of North Carolina. It is a neat brochure and gives an account of the work of the society for the year as carried out by the efficient and zealous secretary, Mr. T. Gilbert Pearson, of Greensboro. The report deals more with the character of the work done than with its results which doubtless have been of the most inconceivable importance in protecting the bird life of North Carolina by educating people up to the value of preventing extermination of birds and in enforcement of the laws for that purpose. We find in the report about a dozen handsome illustrations, including photogravures of the haunts and nesting places of the cormorant in eastern Carolina. No portion of the report, however, is more interesting or valuable to our people than an article on the "Money-value of Quail." Accompanying the article are two illustrations, one showing wire net enclosures for breeding quail near Pinehurst and another showing a peapatch enclosed with wire netting to furnish feeding grounds for the qail.

The Star has frequently commended the well aimed purposes and efforts of the Audobon Society, for the importance of the work and the object for which it is striking are barely less important than that of education itself. It is largely a work of education and its far-reaching importance is in preserving the birds which save thousands of dollars to our agricultural interests by destroying destructive insects. Next to preserving the insect destroyers is the prevention of absolute extermination of our game and song birds, a calamity which is more probable than we realize. Every North Carolinian who owns a foot of land should become earnestly interested in the work of the Audobon Society and should correspond with Secretary Pearson at Greensboro, with the intention of becoming a member and aiding in the work or for the purpose of securing printed information concerning the work and its value to our people. The Star would like to impress upon every man, woman and child in the State, the supreme importance of the successful achievment of the Audobon movement, and we know of no more effective way than inducing them to get in communication with Secretary Pearson who is well posted in Carolina ornithology and has heart and soul in the work of preserving the bird families of our State and in protecting deer, turkeys, wild ducks, etc. The Legislature has passed laws for that purpose and during the past year the Audobon Society has secured 84 convictions for violation of the game laws, including 12 convictions in New Hanover county. The 84 convictions were for illegal shipments of game birds, killing birds, deer, duck and other game out of season, destroying bird's nests, and wantonly killing song birds, and insect-destroying birds fit for no other earthly purpose.

We again revert to the annual report of the Audobon Society of North Carolina to take from it the article on the "Money Value of Quail." We are sure every reader of The Star will be interested in it. The article follows:

"Aside from the value of quail when dead and sold in the market, or when alive and destroyers of noxious insects, (and this value is a great one) the Bob White has become very valuable for purposes of propogation. Of recent years the bird is rapidly becoming extinct in many of the Northern and Western States. This is bringing the quail lands of North Carolina more and more into demand as game preserves, many additional ones of which are being established every year. The farmer who has many quail on his lands has a possible chance of leasing the shooting privileges for a good sum, and in addition to this there is a very great and growing demand for live quail for purposes of propogation on the preserves. Quail for this purpose during the past year have brought prices ranging from $3 to $6 per dozen and in one instance as much as $9 per dozen has been offered for quail in large numbers. The rearing of these birds in capitivity is an experiment which is now being tried in several places. If this enterprise proves successful without doubt much money can be made in this way. On the Pine hurst Preserves in Moore county experiments of this kind in the past two years have been attended with good results, the birds being paired and placed in wire screen enclosures where they have proceeded to build their nests and rear their young with apparently no more concern than if abroad in the fields.

"It is a self-apparent fact that where the supply of food is abundant the increase of birds is naturally much more rapid, rence, to increase the food supply the managers of the Pinehurst Preserves have planted large numbers of pea-patches in the pine woods on their lands and to these the birds resort freely to feed upon the food thus placed at their disposal. The wire fences inclosing these pea-patches have a mesh large enough to readily admit the birds and at the same time prevent chickens or hogs from entering.

"We watch with much interest the experiments being tried at Pinehurst and would like to encourage others to try similar methods of propogating and preserving the qail, because of their money-value, not only to the man upon whose land they happen to be, but to the State at large."

—Indefatigable Senator Beveridge is now about to undertake the Federal regulation of child labor. The elestic insterstate commerce clause again to be stretched to cover the case. Child labor is to be prevented by making it a misdemeanor for a railroad company to transport from one State to another the products of child labor. What we wonder at is whether Mr. Beveridge will make an exception in favor of the speeches of boy orators. RED OR GREEN.

Color Troubles of the Color Blind Poet, Whittier.

It is well known that the poet Whittier was color blind and unable to distinguish red from green. He once bought for himself a necktie which he supposed to be of a modest and suitable olive tint and wore it once. He never wore it again, for his friends soon made him aware that it offended against the traditional quietness of costume enjoined alike by the habits of the Friends and by his own taste. The tie was of flaming scarlet.

On another occasion, when he found a little girl in distress on account of a new gown, made over from her elder sister's, which was not becoming to her coloring and complexion, he tried to console her.

"I wouldn't mind what a rude boy says about it, Mary," he said kindly. "Thee looks very well indeed in it, like an oread, Mary, dressed all in green."

Unfortunately, Mary was not dressed in green. She was red haired, and her dress was red. That was the trouble.

Once, on a day in mid-March, when out walking with a Friend and deeply engaged in conversation, Mr. Whittier approached too near for safety to a place where blasting was going on. The danger signal was shown, but neither Friend noticed it until a workman, violently waving his arms and shouting, leaped before them and warned them back.

"I didn't see the flag at all," said Mr. Whittier's companion.

"I saw it," rejoined the poet, with a twinkle in his eye, "but I thought it was in honor of St. Patrick. Thee knows my defect. I can't tell Erin from explosions except by the harp!" —Youth's Companion.

ROMAN ROSES.

They Are Beautiful and Abundant Because They Eat Meat.

"I have yet to see a rose equal to those grown in Rome," said the amateur horticulturist. "They bloom in the greatest abundance all through the winter, and they are as large and rich and velvety as American Beauties, living out of doors, climbing like ivy or honeysuckle over the crumbling marble walls of ruined temples, gleaming in crimson and green masses upon ancient columns, giving to the grimmest and saddest of mediaeval palazzos an air of gayety and youth.

"One day on the Via Sistina, as I passed the garden that had once been the garden of Lucullus, I saw an old man tending the superb roots that grow there. He was pouring on their roots a dark, rich looking fluid.

"'Why are the Roman roses so beautiful and abundant?' I said to the old man.

"'Because they eat meat,' he answered.

"'Eat meat? Nonsense,' said I.

"'Well, they drink meat—meat extract, which is the same thing,' said the old man. 'We Roman gardeners have for centuries watered our roses thrice a week with a strong decoction of fresh beef—a rich grade of beef tea. They are meat eaters. That is why the roses of Rome are as hardy and prolific as weeds and at the same time as richly, delicately beautiful and as sweetly perfumed as flowers grown under glass.'" —Chicago Chronicle.

Called Back.

A commercial traveler for a London firm secured an order for £1,000 in the west of England and, as it was not duly acknowledged, wrote a letter to the firm calling special attention to it and saying, "I thought you would consider such an order quite a feather in my cap."

In reply he received this note from his principal: "We have filed your order and inclose for your cap the one feather you require."

After a fortnight came another letter from the firm: "The people who gave you the £1,000 order have failed, and we lose the goods. We have this day sent to you a bagful of feathers for you to fly home with, as we do not want you out on the road for us any more."—Strand Magazine.

Food Value of Cheese.

It is said that one pound of cheese is equal in food value to more than two pounds of meat. It is very rich in proteids and fat. Considering this, it is low in price when compared with meat and ought to do good service to the poor man in replacing occasionally the regular diet of meat. In America cheese is looked upon more as a side dish and luxury than in some parts of Europe. The Swiss peasant depends on it as a staple second only to bread, while the use of it in England and Germany is extensive.

HONORS AND WORTH.

Absurdity of Titles That Descend From Father to Son.

When you find a man a most excellent runner, poet, surgeon or mariner, I give him due respect for his skill. If he is very eminent, his occupation esteemed and you chance to be some ruling power, he may receive a title. You do not confer this title because of his grandmother, and you do not make the old lady a duchess or indeed pay her any particular attention. This omission does not reflect discredit on the grandmother. It is obvious to her mind that to make her a peeress because not she, but some one else, has done something "good" would be as absurd as giving her twelve months' hard labor if he had done something otherwise.

Still less rational would it be to make the man's son a peer. The old lady has given the world this grandson. Perhaps she is in a measure the cause of his greatness, just as she might be to a certain extent responsible were he a criminal. But the son of the man did not make his father. He is not to be more greatly praised for what his father has done than for what William the Conqueror did.

The world seldom or never gives a man a title because his father earned one, but it does an equally silly thing when it allows a son to inherit such an "honor," says Home Notes.

Until a man can transmit merit it is absurd to allow him to transmit a testimonial as to merit. And, if there be no pretense of claim to exceptional worth, what solid reason can be advanced for a man receiving a designation that commands deference?

TOOTHPICKS.

A Visit to London and a Little Lesson In Etiquette.

"I ran over for a short visit to London," said a globe trotter. "On the boat was a pretty widow from Altona who disgusted and amused all hands one day by saying:

"'I am surprised that a fast and expensive boat like this should fail to supply us with toothpicks.'

"She thought toothpicks indispensable, like napkins or forks. For thinking so we set her down as a hecker. But wait.

"I dined during my visit in London at Prince's, in Piccadilly, and at the Savoy, in the room that overlooks the embankment and the river, and at the Carlton, where I paid a dollar for a plate of soup, and at all these restaurants, which are admittedly the finest and the smartest and the most fashionable in the world. At all of them there were toothpicks on the table, each toothpick done up in a sterilized envelope.

"This taught me a lesson. It taught me that it is narrow and provincial to despise people for their disregard of certain small rules of etiquette. The things we despise them for, which may be glaring errors in Seattle or New York, may be again, as like as not, the correct thing in Paris and London."—New York Press.

How Sound Waves Move.

The speed with which sound waves are transmitted through the atmosphere depends on several conditions. When the temperature is at 32 degrees F., sounds move with a speed of 1,090 feet per second, the velocity increasing with the temperature at the rate of about one foot of speed per second for each degree above the freezing point. Then, again, in damp air sound moves with a greater velocity than it does in dry air, no odds if the dry air be warm and the damp cold. In water sound moves more than four times as fast as it does in air, or, say, at about the rate of 4,700 feet per second.

Wooden Spoons.

A curious industry in Russia and one which nevertheless finds employment for thousands of men is that of making wooden spoons. In the district of Semenovsk, where they chiefly come from, no fewer than 7,000 men make a living at the trade. The spoons are generally made from birchwood, and a skilled workman can turn out several hundred a day. No fewer than 12,000,000 spoons are manufactured during the course of the year, which are sold at 6 to 8 rubles per thousand. They find a ready market and penetrate as far as Persia, Khiva, Bokhara and Khokand.

Husbands.

A woman who shall be nameless furnishes the following essay on husbands:

"There are three kinds of husbands—the young husbands who make us unhappy because we are so jealous of them, the middle aged husbands who break our hearts because they would rather make money or play golf than devote any attention to us and the old husbands who sicken us with their silly objections whenever we turn to look at younger men."—Chicago Tribune.

Different Times.

Sarasate once found his memory deserting him at a recital, but he discovered the reason of the mishap in time to prevent a failure. A lady was fanning herself in the front row of the stalls. The violinist stopped playing. "Madam," he said, "how can I play in two-four time when you are beating six-eight?" The lady shut up her fan, and the recital was concluded successfully.

Impudent Dog.

A dog had the audacity to bark at the deputy commissioner of Purulia, in Bengal, when he came to the house of the master of the dog on a bike. The owners of the dog were sent up for trial under section 289, and one of them, Karusha, was fined 20 rupees.—Lahore Tribune.

Puzzled.

The distinguished alienist looked worried. "No," he said to the reporter, "I can't give you an opinion as to the sanity of the prisoner." "But surely you have considered the case?" "It isn't that," replied the alienist; "but, you see, each side has sent me a retainer, and as these are the same amounts I am, of course, in temporary doubt."—Philadelphia Ledger.

NATURE SPARES

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering; for how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its beauty and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable store-house of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

LOVE OF AN ENGINE

Heart Stories Told By Grimy Men of The Throttle—Man's Affection For Iron Monsters and Their Ways On the Road.

Locomotive engineers will tell you that of all pieces of machinery a locomotive comes nearest to being a living thing.

It may be slow or it may be fast. It may be a good puller or a poor puller. These things are beyond the power of manufacturer or engineer to determine.

Te get the best out of her—to use the pronoun that engineers employ customarily in speaking of a locomotive—she must be humored. Her engineer must know just what she can do and what is her limit. If a strange engineer attempts to run her, he naturally fails to get the best results from her.

In former days the engine was a gorgeous affair, glittering with brass from one end to the other. Some engineers showed affection for the machine by spending hundreds of dollars on brass works. But all that is changed by modern practice on the big railroads which makes the locomotive as plain as possible.

The engineer studies his engine until he knows every one of her points both good and bad. And it is right here that the locomotive becomes almost human.

Build twenty of them along exactly the same lines, and yet each machine will be different from all the others. This is one of the reasons why the engineer becomes attached to his machine. He is the only one who knows her, and he can get from her the best results.

The story is told of an engineer who said he would almost rather run over a friend than reverse his engine. Reversing an engine while moving at full speed has a tendency to shake her up some. The engineer meant that he would rather risk injuring a friend than his locomotive.

Down on the Missouri Pacific road was an engine that had a record of disaster. It was a passenger engine of the most modern workmanship, and from a mechanical point of view had no superior.

The fireman had an easy job keeping steam up on her, and it was said that the engine could outrun and outpull any engine of her build on the road.

But she was unlucky.

She had been in many smashups and every engineer who had run her had been killed. Yet the last engineer who got her became so proud of her that he never stopped talking about her good qualities. To a friend he said one day as he was oiling up:

"I can't give this engine up. I have become so attached to her that I wouldn't care to run any other. And yet I feel that she'll get me one of these days."

"Well, replied the friend, "If you feel like that you ought to quit running her right away."

"I don't care," said the engineer. "I'm going to stick to her, anyway."

And he did.

And she got him. An empty car blew out on the track one night while he was going at full speed, and when the engine was jacked up the engineer was found dead underneath.

Riding over the Illinois Central the other day in the cab of one of the biggest passenger engines on the road a layman was told by the engineer:

"This engine is too fast for this run. It's too bad we are not behind a little that I could show you what she could do."

Just the same this was the fastest run between Chicago and St. Louis on any of the roads, and the engine at the time her engineer spoke was traveling not much less than a mile a minute. "Watch her jump, now when I use a little of the reserve power," he continued.

And then he pulled the long throttle lever out to its limit—wide open, in railroad parlance.

Jump she did, and began to travel at almost redoubled speed.

"Why, this old girl could travel like that right into St. Louis and not turn a hair," affectionately said the engineer, turning a proud and pleased face to his passenger after he had pushed the throttle back to its normal position.

The engine might have been too fast for that particular run, but it wasn't any too fast for him, that was very evident and if any one had suggested taking her off and substituting a smaller machine that man would have been as much aggrieved as if one had suggested his separation from a near relative.

Of recent years on some of the roads there has been a change in the handling of engines. Where in former years each engineer had his own locomotive, which he ran over a division of a hundred miles or so and then took a rest, now the runs have lengthened to 150 and 200 miles, and some of the engines have as many as three engineers.

On still other roads there is a system which is known as pooling the engines. An engineer will have charge of a machine one day and perhaps he won't get aboard of her again for a month. A new engineer takes her back; still another brings her out again, and so it goes on.

No one takes any special interest in the machine, therefore. Under the old system of one engineer to one engine the engineer will take so much interest in his charge that he spends hours of his own time whipping the locomotive into shape, anxious to bring out the best she can do, for she belongs to him, and his pride is aroused. A good engineer's reputation does not consist wholly in his ability to keep his schedule time, but much of it rests upon his being able to keep his engine in good running order.

But the pooling scheme has done away with all this and no one can be held responsible for the poor working of an engine. The moment the engineer finishes his run he is glad to quit work.

AN ADDRESS TO ALL

Figures and Statistics Quoted to Prove That Such An Institution is a Prime Necessity—Other States and Their Success.

(Reprinted by Request.)

The Reformatory Committe of the King's Daughters of North Carolina have issued the folowing address upon a subject which should be of general interest to all:

To the Men of North Carolina:

The King's Daughters of North Carolina, at their last State convention, elected the undersigned committee to petition the men of the State to establish a reformatory for boys. We ask your careful consideration and endorsement of the plea which we make to you. There are more than one hundred reformatories in this country, all working successfully. The foremost States in this work are Alabama, California, Connecticutt, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Virginia. Why it not North Carolina on this list? Her boys are as well worth saving as others, her men and women as philanthropic, and yet her criminal children are either hardened in their crimes by association with those more vicious than themselves, or have to be sent to other States for reformation; that there may be no doubt of the duty and expediency of having a Reform School, in this State, we mention the folowing statistics:

The majority of States declare that they save 75 per cent of delinquents in their reformatories. The percentage is much larger in the case of youthful than adult offenders. In some cases 90 per cent and more of the youthful criminals are reclaimed. In Nashville, Tenn., a citizen in the presence of the Reform School stated that of 1,300 inmates only 11 had been known to return to criminal life. From the House of Refuge, Cincinnati, we learn that the number of good reports received from boys after leaving the institution is 91 per cent. From Brooklyn we are told that 83 per cent. of juvenile criminals are reclaimed, and only 10 per cent. of adults. There can be no doubt, then, of our duty to educate, morally and mentally, our juvenile offenders. As a matter of economy, money is saved to the State by doing so. A boy is clothed, fed, taught and reclaimed in a Reform School at a cost of $100 a year. A sheriff is paid $100 annually, for feeding him only.

If the wealth of a State depends upon its producers, we increase that class by saving the boys and converting them into working men, and, in like manner, diminish the number of consumers who have to be fed and guarded in the jails.

Come to our aid, then and save the boys by urging that the Legislature establish a reformatory for them.

—Some of the ministers in New York who are alarmed over the reign of the wicked and the fact that the attendance at religious services on Sunday night is not what it ought to be, are endeavoring to capture the crowds by vaudeville features. Dr. Goodchild whose edifice is in the heart of the theatre district, believes that he has adopted the plan which will eventually fill every pew. A week ago he had a whistling girl in the pulpit and last Sunday night he engaged a genius who makes sweet music by running his fingers over the edges of profane wine glasses. Next Sunday night he will have a new performer. The minister is doubtless sincere, but in getting away from an old-time religion he shocks many of the devout who are opposed to these advertising schemes in the House of God.—Raleigh Times.

PLEA FOR THE GOAT

Citizen Writes of Cruelty That is Practiced Every Day on Streets of Wilmington—Crying Need For Immediate Relief.

It is noticed that great cruelty is practiced by young negro boys (many almost grown) toward goats driven about town to collect slops. It seems strange that in a community of Christian people there should be no cognizance taken of such abuse.

The following doggerel is not intended as a poetical effort (perish the thought) but simply and with the earnest hope that it may more lastingly impress the situation on someone with time and money sufficient to stop the use of goats as draft animals. I have no time and no money to spend in an attempt to stop this barbarity—only an infinite pity for the mis-used of any of God's creatures; besides I am almost a stranger within your gates, although a legal resident.

Drawing a load too great,
One he should not draw at all,
The "slop-tub Billy's" life is hard,
His days are bitterest gall,
And his bones show thro' his skin.

The gall is not alone in his heart
Nor the pain that he's made to work,
For his hair is rough and his mouth is sore,
From many a cruel jerk,
And his ribs show thro' his skin.

His little form is racked with pain,
As he staggers down the street,
While the lazy, shiftless "nigger"
Stands ever ready to beat
The bones thro' his skin.

He is ill-fed, ill-treated,
And driven at a cruel pace
To serve the ends of a lazy
Thriftless race,
Which starves his bones thro' his skin.

Is there no law that can be applied
To stop this outrageous shame?
If there is and it's not applied,
Who, who, we demand, is to blame.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hall occupied their beautiful cottage home 101 North Fifth street last week and the day following gave a dinner complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. B. Frank Hall, to which were invited in addition to the guests of honor, the brothers and sisters of the host and hostess. The event was one of much pleasure to the young couple as well as to those whom they so charmingly entertained at one of the most enjoyable of functions, a family dinner party.

The Friday Book club held its initial meeting last week at the residence of Mrs. Walter L. Parsley. The personnel of membership is made up of some of the most cultured ladies of this city and the readings this Winter will be restricted to the works of Southern writers. Mrs. Margaret C. Young read a selection by Sidney Lanier which was much enjoyed by the members who are: Mrs. Richard W. Hogue, Mrs. J. Allan Taylor, Mrs. Margaret C. Young, Mrs. Haywood Clark, Mrs. T. Edward Sprunt, Mrs. Samuel I. Everett, Mrs. Walter L. Parsley, Miss Carrie L. Price, Miss Mollie French and Miss Susie A. Price.

A dinner of unusual beauty and pleasure was that given the early part of the Week by Capt. and Mrs. Jno. H. Quinan at their hospitable home on Dock street. Covers were laid for ten and a most elegant menu was served in courses. The table decorations were a handsome center piece of beautiful flowers and the evning was one of much pleasure to Capt. and Mrs. John Quinan's guests, who were: Miss Lenora Cantwell and Mr. Young, Miss Amy Harlow and Mr. Crapster, Miss Francis Chadbourne and Mr. Reinburg and Miss Madeline DeRosset and Mr. Satterlee.

A movement which has taken definite shape is on foot to erect a memorial window in St. John's Episcopal Church to the memory of Rev. Dr. Patterson, who was its beloved rector for many years. There are a great many who hold in loving memory this man of God, whom they wish to honor by placing in his favorite window of St. John's a memorial to his memory, his virtues and his character. There are many of Dr. Patterson's friends and admirers who will esteem it a pleasure and a privilege to contribute their mite to a window to his memory and for this reason contributions will be received by the ladies of St. John's who have the matter in charge and whose efforts are labors of love.

The marriage of Capt. John Van Bokkelen Metts and Miss Josephine Budd in Petersburg last Tuesday evening, was one of the leading society functions of the season. The marriage was a brilliant one in every respect and the service was performed amid beautiful surroundings. Ladies of the bridal party who are known in this city were Miss Ann Bell Pattison, maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Bridgers bridesmaid. Those in attendance from this city were: Capt. James I. Metts and Miss Eliza Metts, Mr. R. Aubrey Parsley, Mr. Harold M. Chase, Mr. Thomas H. Wright, Mr. John B. Peschau, Mr. George Davis, Mr. Edwin A. Metts, Mr. Junius Davis, Miss Alice Davis, Miss Belle Anderson, Mrs. Edwin A. Northrop and Col. Walker Taylor.

Captain Metts and his bride are on an extended tour and are expected home about the first of December. They will occupy the comfortable residence on Market street purchased by Captain Metts and made beautiful for the home of his married life.

The Princeton Glee Club, which consists of 55 manly fellows, who will be in Wilmington on Christmas night, will receive an old-time Cape Fear welcome. L'Arioso german club will give a dance complimentary to them and they will be entertained individually and collectivelly by some of Wilmington's most exclusive society leaders. Their appearance at the Academy of Music will be under the most favorable auspices and their visit will be a pronounced society event of the holiday season. Mrs. James Sprunt has taken an interest in the club's appearance here and every arrangement will be made which can be conductive to the pleasure of Wilmington's guests.

She will be in Princeton on Tuesday to assist in making some final arrangements for the event which is looked on with unusual anticpiations of pleasure. Quite a number of ladies of this city have accepted invitations to be patronesses of the club's appearance here and the utmost interest is felt in all circles, for it is seldom Wilmington has an opportunity to listen to music of such a high order of talent.

Wednesday, the fifth of December, Miss Elizabeth Payne will become the bride of Mr. R. Aubrey Parsley. The marriage, which will unite them will be a quiet home wedding tow hich only a few intimate friends will be invited. Immediately after the ceremony the couple will start on their wedding trip of about two weeks duration. On their return they will be at home at 211 South Fourth street, which Mr. Parsley has purchased for the pleasure and comfort of the bride. The couple are exceedingly pop ular with their coterie of friends, who wish them a long and happy married life. Mrs. Cameron F. Mac Rae will be the dame of honor and Miss Mary MacRae the bridesmaid. Mr. Robert B. Davis, Jr., will be Mr. Parsley best man and only attendant. Very prety engraved invitations have been sent out to town friends and are as follows:

The Royall-Oliver marriage in Mt Olive last Wednesday was unquestionably the most brilliant society event of the thriving little town for many years. The bride, Miss Mary Louise Oliver, who is a strikingly handsome blonde, never looked more lovely or more queenly than when in bridal robes she met at the altar the man of her choice. Her gown was an exquisite creation of white messaline elaborately trimmed with lace, her veil of silk tulle was caught with lilies of the valley and her bouquet was a shower of bride's roses and maidenhair fern.

Mr. Royall, the happy groom, is a young man of fine qualities and a bright future before him. The church which was handsomely decorated, was a most fitting environment for the impressive ceremony. A pleasing and sweet feature was the singing of Lohingrin's bridal chorus, "Faithful and True" by Misses Hattie Royall, Mabel Kornegay, Frank English, Annie Royall, Pearl Cobb, Clara Littman, Ethel Hatch May Tatum and Mrs. E. B. Flowers.

They formed a picture of beauty in their airy gowns of white wearing in their hair wreathes of lilies of the valley. Tannhauser's wedding march was played at the entrance of the bridal party and during the marriage service. Miss Kornegay rendered "Sunbeams and Shadows" so softly that it came like an echo from some mystic land and then burst triumphantly into Mendelssohn's wedding march as the bridal party retired from the altar.

A beautiful reception was held immediately after the marriage at the home of the bride's parents. Receiving with the bridal party were Mr. and Mrs. William N. Royall of this city, parents of the groom, Mrs. J. F. Oliver, mother of the bride, and Mr. George Royall, of Goldsboro.

A prenuptial entertainment was given last week at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Brazeale at Mt. Olive in honor of Miss Mary Lou Oliver, who became the bride of Mr. Norman N. Royall last Wednesday evening. Miss Oliver with her maid of honor, Miss Carrie McGee, received with the hostess. The parlors were beautifully decorated in red with hearts dotting the walls and resting in every available place. The guests passed from the receiving line to a part of the room where Miss Mabel Kornegay graciously made known the fate of each guest which was a pleasing and mirth producing feature of the evenings pleasures.

The library, in draperies of pink, with pink umbrellas suspended from the ceiling, was festooned with tendrills of smilax, and under a canopy of pink Miss May Tatum, in a beautiful costume, served punch with charming grace.

In the dining room the color scheme of red and white was artistically carried out by red shaded candelabrae, renaissance lace over red and a huge bank of handsome white chrysanthemums in pretty jardinieres, and bells suspended above the table. A beautiful luncheon in courses was served by Mrs. J. F. Oliver, Mrs. D. N. McGee, Miss Ada English and Mrs. R. E. Wooten. At each plate was a heart-shaped souvenir on which was painted a scene appropriate for the occasion. Mrs. Breazeale produced an exquisite little loving cup on which was engraved the date of marriage and two united hearts. From this the Round Dozen Club and other guests drank the bride's health. The toasts were witty while some were tinged with sadness, all of them, however, beautifully expressing the heart-felt wishes for the happiness of the bride-elect. The cup was presented to Miss Oliver by Mrs. Breazeale in a most graceful manner, and was gracefully received. Tiny suit cases were presented as souvenirs to each guest except Miss Oliver. To her Miss Frank English presented a small trunk which had belonged to the great-grandfather of the bride, and contained a collection of articles which had been made for her by the guests present. They were beautiful and useful and betoken the love and esteem in which the bride is held by life-long friends.

A pleasing feature of the evening was writing in the "bride's book." This was the handiwork of Mrs. Breazeale and was both unique and beautiful. It was carried among the guests by Miss Frank English and at the close of the evening was filled with best wishes, beautifully expresed. An amusing feature of the entertainment was the presentation, to an attractive member of the Round Dozen Club, of a tabby kitten, around whose neck was coquettishly tied a huge bow of red ribbon. On two occasions this member had cut cakes and found in her slice a ring, signifying that she would be the first of the number to wed. Miss Oliver's marriage ends her hope in that direction and the tabby cat was given her for consolation. The presentation was made by Miss Carrie McGee in a short and witty speech.

An event fraught with much interest was announced by the following invitations:

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Rehder
At Home
Thursday November twenty-second
Eight O'clock.
Cards. R. S. V. P.

The handsome Rehder home was a scene of unusual beauty and merriment added to the atmosphere of happiness which was a pronounced characteristic of the function which was perhaps the most elaborate of the season. The decorations were artistically and skillfully executed giving an air of charming grace to a scene which was made more beautiful by the handsome gowns of the many guests, and exquisite flowers which were in profusion in pretty vases and bowls. Most tasty refreshments were served in courses and the evening's pleasures to the hostess and their guests were countless and will long be remembered by those who were the recipients of Mr. and Mrs. Rehder's hospitality.

Cards were the form of entertainment offered for the evening's amusement. Miss Bertha Steljes winning the first prize for ladies which was a very handsome china chocolate set while a beautiful fob was won by Mr. Charles Schweiben. A toy drum was given as the "booby" to Mr. Charles Eberhardt, and a miniature jewelry case was awarded to Mrs. Carl W. Polvogt as a consolation for a streak of poor luck at cards.

The descendants in this city of Judge Iredell, a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States under the Washington administration, and Gabriel Johnson, a colonial Governor of this State, have received handsomely engraved invitations to a service which is attracting very much attention throughout the country as one of historical interest. The programme accompanying the invitation is:

Monday, November 19th, 1906, the Governor of Pennsylvania and his party will leave Philadelphia for North Carolina.

Tuesday November 20th, at 10 A. M. at Edenton, N. C., they will join with the Governor and Chief Justice of North Carolina and others, in dedicating a cenotaph to the memory of James Wilson at the Grave-Yard of the Johnston family, where his remains and those of Mr. Justice Iredell have rested for a century.

At 1 P. M. the representatives of Pennsylvania will start for Norfolk, Va., (the nearest seaport to Edenton), accompanied by members of the Society of the Cincinnati of North Carolina as a Guard of Honor.

At Norfilk, Va., at 2:30 P. M. the remains will be received by the United States Government on board the United States gunboat DuBuque, Commander A. F. Fechteler, U. S. N., and the DuBuque will sail at once for Philadelphia.

Wednesday, November 21st, the DuBuque will arrive at Philadelphia at 3:00 P. M., when with the highest civic honors and guarded by United States Marines, the remains will be escorted to Independence Hall, the scene of Wilson's greatest triumphs, where they will lie in state.

Thursday, November 22nd, at 1:30 P. M. the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, as honorary pall bearers, the Attorney General of the United States, and others, will meet at Independence Hall and in procession follow the remains, under escort of the First Troop of Philadelphia City Cavalry, to Christ church, Philadelphia, where the Memorial services will be held and the interment made, the Protestant Episcopal Bishop for the Eastern Diocese of Pennsylvania officiating.

The Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
and
The James Wilson Memorial
Committee
having charge of the removal from North Carolina to Pennsylvania of the remains of
JAMES WILSON
Signer of the Declaration of Independence, Great Leader in the United States Constitutional Convention.

The favor of an immediate reply is requested, to Burton Alva Konkle, secretary of the Committee at the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Newbro's Herpicide.

BE ATTRACTIVE.

Pretty hair is a necessary aid to attractiveness, and every woman can have pretty hair if she will make an intelligent endeavor in that direction.

Neglect of the hair is the greatest enemy of hair beauty, and those who continue to practice neglect seldom fail to lose attractiveness.

Just as soon as the natural glossiness of the hair begins to fade, it shows that there is trouble in the scalp and that dullness, brittleness and lesterlessness of the hair will come and be followed by dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

An invisible vegetable growth (the dandruff germ) in the scalp causes dandruff, and the disease is both contagious and progressive. It requires prompt and continued attention to overcome it and keep it out of the scalp. Newbro's Herpicide will accomplish all this when it is used intelligently. Herpicide will not perform miracles; it will not force you to abandon whatever unsanitary habits are responsible for your scalp trouble, but by its effectiveness, it will aid you to have beautiful hair that Herpicide users are noted for. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

MORE MEN AND WOMEN HAVE GOTTEN POSITIVE RESULTS FROM THE USE OF NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE THAN FROM ALL OTHER HAIR REMEDIES COMEINTD.

At Drug Stores—Send 10c in stamps to The Herpicide Company, Department L. Detroit, Mich., for a sample.

TOILET OF THE DIVER

OPERATION OF PUTTING ON AND TAKING OFF HIS COSTUME.

One of the Requisites of the Diver's Dressing Platform Is an Old Tin Can—A Lesson In the Art of Taking Things Easy—Necessity For Care.

To watch a diver while he is dressing or divesting himself of his professional apparel is not only to be taught a lesson in the art of taking things easily, but also impresses one with the fact that the diver's is the only occupation under the sun in which a tin can is a toilet requisite.

The can in question is not an ornamental object, such as a silver backed hairbrush is or a set of manicure instruments, but the diver's valet needs it in his business as much as any fop needs either of the silver implements, for it is in this battered old tin that the valet drops the thumbscrews that keep the rubber cloth of the diving suit confined in place between the outer and inner plates of the cuirass-like shell the diver wears over his shoulders and across his breast. There they remain until the diver is ready to dress again, when the valet carefully picks them out of the tin and screws them back in place.

The operation of dressing a diver requires two distinct movements, one taking place on the deck of the vessel or platform from which he is working, the other at the head of the ladder on which the diver descends to the depths below. It is a business that requires a good deal of time, for the diver's life depends on just how carefully each of the several things are done, and no one sacrifices thoroughness to speed.

The diver always has a comfortable place to sit on before he begins removing his shoes, after which he draws on a long pair of heavy woolen stockings over the legs of trousers. Over these again he pulls on another pair of trousers, and then he draws on the lower part of his diving suit proper. After that is done he is in the hands of his valet, who is also the man who tends the air pipe and signal rope after the diver has descended to the bottom of the sea.

One of the curiosities of this operation is the immobility of the man who is being dressed. He sits perfectly still with his hands clasped between his knees, rarely speaking, his eyes fixed on some distant point as though he were absorbed in considering some weighty problem.

Meanwhile the valet has been drawing the rubber suit up on the diver's arms and part way up over his chest, and then he slips down over his head the steel cuirass that keeps the pressure of the water away from his chest and also serves to support the weight of the copper helmet on his shoulders.

At this point in the operation the tin can comes into use, and the valet takes from it the brass thumbscrews that confine the upper edges of the diving suit between the cuirass and the four steel bands that are fastened outside of it. Then the valet puts a black silk skullcap on the diver's head, and the diver waddles over to the head of the ladder after a pair of heavy rubber bands are slipped over the rubber cuffs of the suit, for the diver works with bared hands.

Then come the final touches of the costume, which are always made as near the head of the ladder as possible, for these operations consist of putting on the weighted shoes, the weighted breast belt and the copper helmet. The diver slips his feet into the shoes of cast iron, and his valet and another helper buckle them around his instep. Then he bends down, resting his arms on the head of the ladder, while the belt, on which are fastened great, thick squares of lead, is buckled around his breast and across his shoulders.

The signal cord is fastened to the breastplate with leather thongs, and then the signal is given to the man at the air pump to "work lively," which means that he is to send the wheel around at a much faster pace than he does when the diver is at work, this being done to get a good current of air passing through the pipe. Least time of all does it take to put the helmet on, for it is dropped into place, and after one half turn the thing is done.

Down goes the grotesque figure below the surface of the water, up from the helmet comes a constant stream of air bubbles, and if the diver is not working at too great a depth you can presently hear the click of his tools ringing away at work.—New York Press.

Emerson's Prayer.

Whittier and Emerson were taking a drive together when they passed a small, unpainted house by the roadside.

"There," said Emerson, pointing out the house, "lives an old Calvinist, and she prays for me every day. I am glad she does. I pray for myself."

"Does she?" said Whittier. "What does thee pray for, friend Emerson?"

"Well," replied Emerson, "when I first open my eyes upon the beautiful world I thank God that I am alive and live so near Boston."

Unprofessional.

"You say she's only an amateur nurse?"

"Yes. If she had been a professional nurse she wouldn't have married the first patient that came along. She'd have looked around a little first."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE FOUR PICKERTS.

Popular Prices All This Week at The Academy.

All this week the Academy offers popular prices, the attraction being the Four Pickerts, who are not strangers to Wilmington by any means. The company is well remembered and little Miss Blanche Pickert is especially popular with local theatregoers. She will this time be seen in one of her latest vaudeville turns. The Pickerts make a specialty of vaudeville and hence something bright and up-to-date may be expected in this line.

The opening bill to-morrow night will be "In Oklahoma," which is a play with plenty of wholesome comedy.

Temperance Lecture Tonight.

Rev. A. D. Wilcox, who is to deliver an illustrated lecture on the subject of temperance at the First Baptist church tonight, reached the city yesterday afternoon. He had an interview with Pastor Fred D. Hale, and all details were arranged for the stereopticon work used in the lecture. Dr. Hale desires to commend Mr. Wilcox as a man worthy of the best hearing that the temperance people of the city can give him, and to say that the people who do not hear him will miss a treat. The children are especially invited, as the lecture will be educational in its character. The services will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

TO VISIT FORT CASWELL.

Party of About Sixty on Chamber of Commerce Trip.

Accepting the invitation of the commander of the post a party of about 60 members of the Chamber of Commerce and their families will go down to Fort Caswell Wednesday morning on a special trip of the steamer Wilmington, leaving at 10:30 and returning in the afternoon. The visitors will be entertained by the officers at the fort and a thoroughly delightful affair is expected. The invitations have been sent out and responses have been received for about the number indicated.

Sale of Baskets.

An event of much interest among the ladies of the city is a special sale of fancy baskets now in progress at Gaylord's store, on North Front street. The lot includes 500 drummer's samples that are being sold at half prices. There are some very attractive offerings in the lot and the wonder is that all of them have not gone before.

PATRICK'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

Will Never be Executed—Governor Will Save Him.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New York, Nov., 24.—The World tomorrow will say:

"Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder of William Marsh Rice, has won his fight for life. His end will not be in the electric chair. Before Governor Higgins gives up his office as chief executive of the State he will sign a commutation of the death sentence. Life imprisonment will be Patrick's fate. Patrick's fight for life is the most remarkable of its kind ever made in this country. No other person has ever been confined as long in a death house awaiting execution as has Patrick. For more than four years and seven months he has been living within the shadow of the electric chair. During that time he has been present when seventeen other unfortunates were taken from their cells and marched along the narrow passage which separates the condemned cell block from the execution chamber.

IMMENSE TOBACCO SALES.

Three Million Pounds of Leaf Sold at Danville Yesterday.

By Wire to the Morning Star.

Danville, Va., Nov., 24.—Over 3,000,000 pounds of tobacco were sold at public auction here this week which is a record breaker for Danville, which is the largest loose leaf tobacco market in the world. Three sales at the same time and equally as many corps of buyers were necessary to dispose of the weed that came in here in wagons driven by five thousand farmers from miles around. To accommodate the trade Saturday is observed by the warehousemen as a holiday, but today for the first time in 12 years, sales were held and at every warehouse, three auctioneers were at work at the same time.

Despite the immense sales, prices have remained firm, with no decrease on any grades though there is a very noticable increase along many. Fine wrappers have been bringing from 50 to 60 cents per pound.

TOO MUCH WHISTLE BLOWING.

Useless Saluting by Steamboats to Be Prohibited in Future.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New York, Nov., 24.—Captain Hira Harris who is in charge of the local board of steamboat supervisors received word today from the supervising inspector general, George Uhler, at Washington, that in the future all whistling by steamboats, except such as is absolutely necessary, must be stopped. The supervising general adds that unnecessary whistling by steamboats has become a positive menace to navigation.

Among the abuses mentioned is the saluting of new boats by every passing steamer and the habit that boats have of exchanging friendly greetings. Captain Harris said that he would see to it that the new regulations were obeyed in his jurisdiction, which extends from Canada to the Delaware capes.

CANDIDATE EMERY TOOK WATER

Retracted Charge of Bribery Made During Campaign.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Philadelphia, Nov., 24.—Lewis Emery, Jr., of Bradford, Pa., candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, on the fusion ticket in the recent campaign, who was sued by State Senator James P. McNichol, for charging him with bribery in connection with the election of a speaker of the State House of Representatives in 1901, today publicly retracted his statement and in consequence the suits against Mr. Emery were promptly withdrawn by Senator McNichol.

The retraction was given out by the attorney s for both sides. Senator McNichol had sued Mr. Emery for $25,000 damages and had also instituted criminal suit against him.

SHOULD LEARN OF AGRICULTURE

Wise Movement in Conference on Secondary Education in The South.

CONVINCING REASONS WHY

Not to Know of Soil, Plants and Domestic Things is Dense and Unpardonable Ignorance—Preparation of Teachers.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Charlottesville, Va., Nov., 24.—The conference on secondary education in the South came to a close tonight. The final subjects discussed were science the high schools, and agencies and methods of training teachers for the high schools.

President Venable, of the University of North Carolina, was of the opinion that pure science should not be taught in the high school. President Brown Ayres, of the University of Tennessee, accepted in the main the point of view of Dr. Venable, but thought the teaching of science in the schools feasible of the teacher can discover methods of utilizing native material and does not attempt too exhaustive treatment of scientific theories. Both agreed that no science should be taught without the aid of laboratory methods.

Papers were submitted on the agencies and methods of training high school teachers, by Professors P. P. Claxton, of the University of Tennessee, and William H. Heck, of the University of Virginia. Dr. Claxton stated that the high school is really the heart and center of the whole system; that it is not a coaching place for the colleges, but a school for preparation for life. The ideal preparation of its teachers is to be found in the colleges and universities. It should be considered one of the highest duties of State universities, he said, to prepare teachers for the public high schools.

The chief topic considered at the morning sesion was the teaching of agriculture in secondary schools. Undoubtedly the subject never received at any time and place such a masterful and exhaustive treatment as that devoted to it by three of the most noted agricultural experts this country has ever seen, Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, of Lake Charles, La., demonstrator of agricultural work in the Southern States; Dick J. Crosby, an expert in the Department of Agriculture in Washington, and Professor William Lockhead, one of the two chief representatives on the subject in the Dominion of Canada. These gentlemen brought the whole conference to the belief that some knowledge of agriculture belongs to the equipment essential to a reasonably broad education, even a common education. Not to know something about the history and management of soil, plants and domestic things, is dense and unpardonable ignorance. Agriculture ranks with algebra, geometry, geography, history and the sciences as among the common things that ought to be known, and agriculture is the most important of all these branches. The speakers demonstrated the practical method of introducing and carrying on this important subject in the public schools.

TILLMAN WILL HAVE HIS SAY.

Can't Avoid Race Question in His Chicago Lecture.

(By Wire to The Morning Star)

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Senator Tillman of South Carolina, passed through Chicago to-day on his way to South Haven, Mich. When informed that the colored people of Chicago had protested against the delivery of a lecture here by him he said:

"I am surprised that three should be any talk in this city of a negro uprising to prevent a lecture which is for a hospital which has never yet closed its doors to one of the colored race. It is absurd for the colored people to think that they can prevent a Senator of the United States from talking. They might as well try to stop President Roosevelt. I shall not change my lecture in the slightest degree The subpect is "The Annexation of Cuba," and this question is so interwoven with the negrop roblem in this country that it will be impossible for me to avoid discussing the latter."

GREAT DIAMOND ROBBERY

From $70,000 to $75,000 in Gems is Stolen in Philadelphia.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Pittsburg, , Nov., 24.—The police department of this city has been asked by the Philadelphia authorities to look for jewelry valued at from $70,000 to $75,000 which was stolen from the residence of Henry Barnett, head of the Black Diamond File Works of Philadelphia. According to the reports received here the robbery was one of the most sensational of its kind that has been perpetrated in the country. The Philadelphia police, the report says, have no clue to the robbers. The list of plunder is a long one, numbering nearly forty pieces. The most magnificent in the lot was a large fancy scroll brooch containing 85 diamonds. This piece was valued at $15,000.

ARBITRATION ON THE SOUTHERN

Will be More Than Month Till Report is Made.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Washington, Nov., 24.—According to the procedure agreed upon by the arbiters between the Southern railway company and the machinists in its employ, it will be more than a month before final award can be made. P. J. Conlon, representing the machinists, is to file a statement of the case from their point of view by December 1. Copies of this will go to Judge Gray, of Delaware, selected as the umpire and Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of the Southern who represents that company on the board. Mr Thom has been given until December 20 to make answer. Mr. Conlon is then to have until December 31 to make rejoinder.

T. M. Butler, express messenger, was killed in a rear end collision at Edgewood, Fla., four miles from Jacksonville yesterday. An Atlantic Coast Line express from the South was running in two sections. In rounding a sharp curve the second section crashed into the rear car of the first section killing Butler and injuring other members of the train crew. The passengers in the first section were badly shaken up but none seriously hurt.

WIRELESS FROM ROOSEVELT.

President Well on His Return From Panama Trip.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The Navy Department to-day received a wireless dispatch from the battleship Louisiana giving its location at 5:30 o'clock this morning as 530 miles north of San Juan.

This indicates that the ship, bringing the President home from his Panama and Porto Rican visit is making about 15 knots an hour, although the message apparently was mixed in sending and rather confusing to Navy officials.

The indefinite message received by the Navy Department was caught about 5 o'clock eastern time, at Washington navy yard. The operator on the Louisiana apparently was trying his instruments. It is not known with what station he was attempting to communicate. As near as could be made out the message gave the location of the Louisiana as 530 miles from San Juan. Either there has been a mistake in the leaving time of the Louisiana from Ponce or the battleship is making much better time than Navy Department officials thought her capable and this leads them to believe that the message was inaccurately taken. The communication, however, shows that the President is in the wireless zone and something more definite probably will be received during the day.

The Mayflower which will bring the President and Mrs. Roosevelt from Hampton Roads to Washington on Tuesday, is expected to get into communication by her own wireless apparatus with the Louisiana. The President will then direct at what point he desires to land and where he will board the Mayflower.

Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks arrived in Jacksonville yesterday from Tampa, and will be the guests of Senator and Mrs. J. P. Taliaferro. Mrs. Fairbanks was the guest of honor yesterday afternoon at a reception given by Mrs. Taliaferro. The Vice President was tendered a banquet last night by the Jacksonville Board of Trade. Mr. Fairbanks made an address which aroused great enthusiasm. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks will leave this morning for Washington.

ELECTRICAL FIXTURES.

Persuade your wives to stay away from the second floor of the Southern Electric Company's building if you do not wish them to spend money on fixtures.

LADIES.

Come and stay as long as you like. We have devoted our entire second floor to the exhibition of fixtures. Whether you contemplate purchasing now or not, we invite you to call and examine the finest and most complete line of gas, electric, and combination fixtures in the state.

In this lot are some beautiful art glass portables that would make most acceptable

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

We will hold them as long as you like but we certainly cannot hold them unless you choose now.

We think it is all very interesting but the part that interests you most is the price. The low prices are all out of proportion to the style of the fixtures. It will be very little trouble for us to prove this statement to you if you will give us the opportunity.

We will wire your residence for electric lights as reasonably as we will sell you fixtures.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—Maxton News.—We believe that it was Rev. E. McWhorter and Mr. A. J. MsKinnon that were the originators of the movement to establish the Methodist College here. They have performed a great service for their people. Mr. Patterson's speech in advocacy of the cause of Maxton before the College committee was an able and most tactful effort. In the most pleasant manner he showed the disadvantages of the other places, at the same time, retained the friendship of those that were against us at the outset.

—Fayettevile, Nov., 23.—Judge-elect C. C. Lyon will hardly go home with a pocket full of money after serving his last court as solicitor. The docket this week numbers 62 cases, but not one of any special interest. Perhaps a lawyer knows better, but to a layman it looks as if many of them could have been settled in the mayor's or the magistrate's courts, whereby the public road chain-gang would have been materially increased. It is significant that carrying concealed weapons heads the list. Larceny comes next, and selling whiskey has the third place.

—Congressman-elect Richard N. Hackett was a visitor in Raleigh on Friday. He talked very interestingly about his stirring campaign and fine victory in the Eigth district. He was asked the question what Spencer Blackburn's attempt to contest the election would amount to, and replied: "There never was a finer election from a Democratic standopint. If there were any irregularities they were on the Republican side of the fence. The fact is that Spencer Blackburn is in this contest for another rake-off. I do not anticpiate any results of course. It will simply the trouble for me to get evidence to rebut any attempted evidence he will present. As a matter of fact, the Republicans in the district are bitterly averse to his action in attempting to contest. A lot of them opposed his election and voted against him."

—Winston-Salem, Nov., 23.—A message was received here this afternoon from Mt. Airy to the effect that the suits against Graham Trotter and Elmer Brim, two young men of Mt. Airy, charged with shooting and seriously wounding Miss Bethania Ashby, while the latter was out driving with a lady and a gentleman friend, had had been compromised by which Miss Ashby is to be paid $2,500 by Brim. Trotter is fined $300; Brim is fined $400 and costs. The case was set for trial today in Surray court. It is estimated that this, with the fees, and the $2,500 to Miss Ashby, will aggregate more than $5,000. The message reports Miss Ashby doing nicely. The attending physician is quoted as saying that while she is not out of danger there is strong probability that she will never have free use of her right arm. The little finger on her right hand was shot off, while another ball entered her back, near the shoulder, coming out in the neck.

—Asheville, Nov. 23.—Incidentally growing out of a pre-election charge that Solicitor Brown, of the Fifteenth Judicial district, was collecting illegally $4 fees on sci fas cases, the State Supreme Court will be called upon to determine whether or not the solicitor in this district or any other district in the State is entitled to collect the $4 fee on sci fa. The question of costs was heard by Judge Allen this afternoon on motion of Col. Lusk to retax the costs in a certain case. Col. Lusk argued that both the clerk's costs and the solicitor's fee were illegal. The solicitor's fee and the clerk's costs were the same in the case at issue as have been taxed in other cases. After hearing the argument Judge Allen held that the solicitor's fee of $4 was illegal. He said that there was a decision of the Supreme Court of some place that so held. Judge Allen said that he was positive he had seen this decision many years ago, but admitted in looking into the matter that he was unable to find it. He held, however that the fee was not legal and Judge Shuford, attorney for Solicitor Brown, appealed to the Supreme Court. The final decision of the matter will be of interest all over the State. The whole thing came up during the last election when Democrats charged that Solicitor Brown, in taking $4 fees on sci fas, was accepting illegal fees. The solicitor contended that Democratic solicitors were taking the same fees that he was and that there was law for such fee collections. Judge Allen holds that there is not.

—Greensboro, Nov. 23.—John Ward and Minnie Osborn, who live in the southern part of the county, are in jail charged with setting fire to the barn of Newton Leonard, which was burned Wednesday night while the family slept. The building burned was a valuable one, and in addition to a lot of feed, five cows and three horses perished in the flames. There was no insurance on the property. Mr. Leonard lives several miles from the city and is one of the best farmers of the county. Upon finding his barn and stock reduced to ashes yesterday morning Mr. Leonard came to Greensboro and notified the officers and stated that he believed that it was the work of an incendiary. Deputy Sheriffs Weatherly and Crutchfield were despatched to the scene and after an investigation arrested the two parties. The man is a negro and the woman is white and is also a relative of the family—sister of Mrs. Leonard, it is said. Several days ago there was a family quarrel. Mrs. Leonard and the Osborne woman had disagreed over the division of their father's property after his death. Mrs. Leonard was given a nice farm and by the terms of the will the Osborne woman was left only an acre of land. Other troubles may also be in part responsible for the trouble. The officers who made the arest played the part of a real Sherlock Holmes. When the barn was burned Mr. Leonard made an investigation and found that there were tracks leading to and from the barn. The officers examined these and traced them to the doors of the two people arrested. The tracks indicated further that when the persons approached the building they were walking and when returning they had run.

His Promotion.

A somewhat turbulent private wrote to his mother: "I am sorry you had no letter last week, but I am a defaulter, and it gives me a heap of extra work." The good woman in reply begged him not to be too hard on the others, but to remember he had been a private himself. I regret to say that he roared with laughter and read the letter aloud for the benefit of all who shared his room.—Miss M. Loane, a Queen's Nurse, in Contemporary Review.

Musical Note.

A gentleman at a musical party where the lady was very particular not to have the concord of sweet sounds interrupted, seeing that the fire was going out, asked a friend in a whisper, "How could you stir the fire without interrupting the music?"

"Between the bars!" replied the friend.—Home Notes.

There is no duty we so much underrate as the duty of being happy.—Stevenson.

Empty Longevity.

"Pa, Methuselah lived to be very old, didn't he?"

"Yes, my son, about 969 years, I believe; but, then, as far as I can learn, there was just about as much doing per year in those days as there is in five minutes now."—Watson's Magazine.

Appreciation.

Dear Doctor—Inclosed find check for professional services rendered by you to my late uncle. I thank you for your zeal in the matter and shall not fail to recommend you to all my other wealthy relatives.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

In families well ordered there is always one firm, sweet temper, which controls without seeming to dictate. The Greeks represented persuasion as crowned—Bulwer.

No More Shoes Sent Out On Approval

AFTER DECEMBER 1ST.

At a meeting of the Shoe Dealers of this city, the following resolutions were adopted:

"That the present method of our sending out Shoes on approval is injurious to our business advancement, and it being self-evident to us that the same is abused and, believing as we do, that this can be adjusted in a manner satisfactory to ourselves and our customers, and, knowing as we do, that the only satisfactory way for a customer to fit him or herself, is to try his or her shoes on in the store, where the different widths and sizes and styles may be tried and a fit assured, and being desirous, as we are, that our customers be given the benefit of our study and knowledge of the Shoe business, we do hereby agree, that on and after the first day of December, 1906, we will not send out any shoes on approval in this city, that is 'Deliver to any person or persons for trial at their home or residence, or for their inspection or for an anticipated sale.'

"That as a guarantee of our good faith and intentions, we do hereby bind ourselves under a cash forfeit of $50.00, said forfeit to be paid, one-half to the informer and one-half to the association, upon conviction of our having violated or broken our agreement."

ELECTRICAL DEVICE

South Dakota Farmer's Son Pulls Down Electricity in Benjamin Franklin Fashion and Converts It to His Own Use.

South Dakota cities are supplied with electric light, the electricity for which is generated by the power of artesian wells; farm machinery is run by motors and turbine wheels operated by the gushing wells between the Missouri and James rivers, but it has been left to a South Dakota farmer to discover that enough electricity may be taken from the air above the buttes to furnish the power which will run electric lights, thrashing machines and water pumps, says the New York Herald.

Such a discovery is one of the marvels of the electrical world and a dream of inventors for decades, but John H. Stranhan, son of a well-to-do farmer near Miller, S. D., has made the discovery, and from Sully Buttes may be seen a number of tandem box kites while half way to the earth on a No. 8 copper wire hangs a strange white box the size of a bee hive.

From the copper wires which descend from this box enough electrical energy is secured to run the motors with which the Stranhan home is lighted; a feed grinder and threshing machine operated and a big electrical pump which pours water into the irrigating ditches.

Young Stranhan is a graduate of an Eastern polytechnical school where he went to complete his studies after graduating from the University of Nebraska in Lincoln. Since leaving the school he has devoted much of his time to studying the Hertzian waves, the electrical waves which make the wireless telegraph possible. He has experimented under the belief that it was possible to collect the electricity in the air and use it for commercial purposes.

He now declares he has perfected a device which gives him the first current from the air about Sully Buttes and by a series of inductions the power is increased until it runs all the machinery on the Stranhan farm.

Stranhan says that his scheme was successful from the start, so far as the production of an electrical current was concerned, but that the difficulty was in procuring a current sufficient potentially to be of utility in farm work. After months and months of study and experimentation, however, he says that he hit upon a simple device which answered the requirements and that now he is able to secure from the clouds a current strong enough to run a 20-horse power motor. He says by increasing the size of his collector he is confident that he will be able to produce currents of practically unlimited power.

Made Happy For Life.

Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent, at St. Alban's, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weaknesses, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by R. R. Bellamy's drug store. Price 50c.

THE ALMANAC FIRESIDE.

Charlotte Editor's Dream of Days Past and Gone.

"Blum's Salem Almanac. The time is about at hand for it to make its annual appearance and tell us all about what sort of weather we are going to have in 1907; when to plant the garden; what sort of yerbs to get to head off an attack of rheumatism; what remedy to get in case of a bee sting; how to fix it all right for a cow that has lost her cud; how to make hens lay eggs and in short how to live at home and enjoy life. With Blum's almanac hanging by its little loop of blue thread from a nail in a corner of the mantle, what need is there for a doctor? Why look at the evening paper to see what the weather is going to be for the next 24 hours, when by consulting the almanac, one can see what the weather will be on any of the 365 days in the year? And then that old-fashioned wood cut for December picturing the farmer and his family sitting around the blazing hearth—isn't there an air of perfect contentment and comfort in it? Blessed is the man who these Winter evenings can draw up his chair to a corner of the fire place with a copy of the almanac hanging from one nail and a turkey wing fan from another, his wife in her corner with her book or sewing, his children droning over their lessons, the bird dog blinking at the fire and shoving a little further away as a spark pops out from the back log and bursts into a small shower of pyrotechnics. Yes, we are thankful for the almanac, the log fire and the Winter nights. They are great. The young people who sit around the modern coal grate that could be screened by a No. 7 shoe and who hang their mantels with drug store calendars, know nothing of home comfort, and may think The Chronicle old-fashioned but let me tell you my youngster, old fashioned people are the best. Give us a nipping cold night, a blazing fire the almanac same os we have pictured it—and beat it if you can.—Editor Wade Harris, in Charlotte Chronicle.

PEANUTS ARE SCARCE.

Possibility of Price Going to Ten Cents a Pound.

(Special to News and Observer.)

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 19.—Peanut companies have realized the shortage in the peanut crop and are sending their buyers to every peanut producing point that they may secure some stock before the farmers realize the extreme high prices they should receive for their peanuts this esaon.

Bunch peanuts are selling to-day at five cents per pound and other grades are bringing corresponding high prices. Machine picked peanuts have been sold this week at 4 1-2 cents per pound.

The peanut acreage was greatly reduced this year and the continued rains during the summer months caused the yield per acre to be very much less than previous years. Extreme unfavorable weather conditions during harvesting season, seriously and greatly damaged the crop and from the best information obtainible the supply of good nuts will be considerably less than 50 per cent of an average crop. Under these conditions prices will run very high and if there is not over 50 per cent. of an average crop the supply of nuts would be entirely exhausted about June 1.

We are told that within the last 20 years peanuts sold for 10 1-4 cents per pound, and if the conditions of this crop are as serious as present conditions indicate nuts will sell for 10 cents a pound or above if there are any to be had during the latter part of this season.

Billy the Buck

By HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS

Copyright by S. S. McClure Co.

ONE day when I was working on a Dakota ranch the boss, a person by the name of Steve, urged me to take an ax, go forth and chop a little wood, which I did.

The weather was ideal—a Dakota fall; air vital with the mingled pleasant touch of frost and sun, like ice cream in hot coffee, and still as silence itself. I had a good breakfast; was in excellent health and spirits. The boss could by no means approach within a mile unperceived, and everything pointed to a pleasant day. But, alas, as the Copper Lined Killelubird of the Rockies sings, "Man's hopes rise with the celerity and vigor of the hind leg of the mule only to descend with the velocity of a stout gentleman on a banana peel."

On reaching the grove of cottonwoods I sat down for a smoke and a speculative view of things in general, having learned at my then early age that philosophy is never of more value than when one should be doing something else.

I heard a noise behind me, a peculiar noise, between a snort and a violent bleat. Turning, I saw a buck deer and from the cord and bell around his neck recognized him as one Billy, the property of Steve's eldest boy. He was spoken of as a pet.

This was the touch needed to complete my Arcadia, the injection of what at the time I considered to be poetry into the excellent prose of open air life. Who could see that graceful, pretty creature and remain unmoved? Not I, at all events. I fancied myself as a knight of old in the royal forest, which gave a touch of the archaic to my speech.

"Come here, thou sweet eyed forest child!" I cried. And here he came.

At an estimate I should say that he was four ax handles, or about twelve feet, high as he up-ended himself, brandished his antlers and jumped me. My ax was at a distance. I moved. I played knight to king's bishop's eighth, in this case represented by a fork of the nearest tree, a wise and subtle piece of strategy, as it resulted in a drawn game.

My friend stood erect for awhile, making warlike passes with his front feet, which, by the way, are as formidable weapons as a man would care to have opposed to him; then, seeing that there was no sporting blood in me, he devoured my lunch and went away, a course I promptly imitated as far as I could. I departed.

Hitherto I had both liked and admired Steve. His enormous strength, coupled with an unexpected agility and an agreeable way he had of treating you as if you were quite his own age, endeared him to me. When I poured out my troubles to him, however, rebuking him for allowing such a savage beast to be at large, he caused my feelings to undergo a change, for instead of sympathizing he fell to uproarious laughter, slapped his leg and swore that it was the best thing he'd ever heard of and wished he'd been there to see it.

There are probably no worse teases on earth than the big boys who chase the cow on the western prairies. They had "a horse on the kid," and the poor kid felt nightmare ridden indeed. If I were out with them some one would assume an anxious look and carefully scout around a bunch of grass in the distance, explaining to the rest that there might be a deer concealed there, and one could not be too careful when there were wild beasts like that around. Then the giggling rascals would pass the suspected spot with infinite caution, perhaps breaking into a gallop, with frightened shrieks of "The deer, the deer!" while I tried to look as if I liked it and strove manfully to keep the brine of mortification from rolling down my cheeks.

I didn't let my emotions take the form of words, because I had wit enough to know that I could not put a better barrier between myself and a real danger than those husky lads of the leather breeches and white hats. For all that I had a yearning to see one of them encounter the deer at his worst. I did not wish any one hurt and was so confident of their physical ability that I did not think any one would be, but I felt that such an incident would strengthen their understanding.

This thing came to pass, and, of all people, on my arch enemy, Steve. If I had had the arrangement of details I could not have planned it better. Because of my tender years the light chores of the ranch fell to my share. One day every one was off, leaving me to chink up the "bull pen," or men's quarters, with mud against the cold of approaching winter. Steve had taken his eldest boy on a trip to pick out some good wood.

Presently arrived the boy, hatless, running as fast as he could tear, the breath whistling in his lungs. "Come quick!" was the message.

It seems the deer had followed the couple, and when the boy fooled with his old playmate the deer knocked him down and would have hurt him badly but that his father instantly jumped into the fray and grabbed the animal by the horns with the intention of twisting his head off. The head was fastened on more firmly than Steve supposed. The powerful man thought it would be an easy matter to throw his antagonist. What he did not at all take into account was that the buck was both larger and stronger than he. Though raised on a bottle, the deer had grown into a splendid specimen of its kind. He was by long odds the largest deer I ever saw.

Well, Steve got the surprise of his life. It didn't take him long to see the battle was all against him; that the best he could hope to do was to hold his own until help arrived; so he sent the boy off hotfoot. Although his power for a short exertion was great, Steve was in no kind of training, having allowed himself to fatten up and being an inordinate user of tobacco. Per contra, the deer felt freshened and invigorated by exertion. That is the deuce of it in struggling with an animal—he doesn't tire.

I knew that Steve was in sore trouble, or he never would have sent for help. The boy's evident distress denied the joke I might otherwise have suspected, so I grabbed up a rope and made for the grove, the boy trailing me. I should have waited to get a gun, but I didn't think of it. Those were the days when I could run, when it was an exhilaration to sail over the prairie. The importance of my position as rescuer, which any one who has been a boy will understand, lent springs to my feet.

It was well for Steve that mine were speedy legs. When I got there his face was gray and mottled, like an old man's, and his mouth had a weak droop, very unlike the devil-may-care Steve. The two had pawed up the ground for rods around in the fight. The deer's horns beneath where the man gripped them were wet with the blood of his torn palms. Steve's knees, arms and head were trembling as if in an ague fit. He was all in physically, but the inner man arose strong above defeat. "Here's—your—deer—Kid!" he gasped. "I—kept—him—for you!"

I yelled to him to hold hard for one second, took a running jump and landed on Mr. Buck's flank with both feet. It was something of a shock. Over went deer, man and boy. I was on my pins in a jiffy, snapped the noose over the deer's hind legs, tangled him up anyhow in the rest of the riata and snubbed him to the nearest tree. Then Steve got up and walked away to where he could be ill with comfort. And he was good and sick.

When he felt better he arose and opened his knife, swearing that he would slit that critter's throat from ear to ear, but Steve, Jr., who before this had arrived on the scene, pleaded so hard for the life of the pet that big Steve relented and Mr. Billy Buck was saved for further mischief.

That afternoon two of us rode out and roped him, "spreading" him between us as we dragged him home. He fought every step of the way. My companion, a hot headed Montana boy, was for killing him a half dozen times. However, feeling that the deer had vindicated me, I had a pride in him and kept him for a timely end. We turned him loose in a corral with a blooded bull calf, some milk cows, work steers and other tame animals. "And I bet you he has 'em all chewing the rag inside of twenty-four hours." said my companion.

That night Steve made ample amend for his former mirth. Indeed, he praised my fleetness and promptness of action so highly that I was seized by an access of modesty as unexpected as it was disorganizing.

The next day Steve stood on the roof of the shed at the end of Billy Buck's corral. Suddenly he straightened up and waved his hat. "Deer and bull fight!" he called. "Come a-running, everybody!" We dropped our labors and sprinted for the corral, there to sit upon the shed and watch the combat. Steve didn't know what began the trouble, but when I got there the young bull was facing the deer, his head down, blowing the dust in twin clouds before him, hooking the dirt over his back in regular fighting bull fashion and anon saying, "Bh-ur-ur-ooor!" in an adolescent bass profundo, most ridiculously broken by streaks of soprano. When these shrill notes occurred the little bull rolled his eyes around as much as to say, "Who did that?" and we, swinging our legs on the shed roof, laughed gleefully and encouraged him to sail in.

The bull, having gone through the preliminaries of his code, cocked his tail straight in the air and charged. The buck waited until he was within three feet; then he shot sideways and shot back again, his antlers beating with a drumstick sound on the bull's ribs. "Baw-aw!" said the bull. Probably that hurt.

Again bull faced buck. This time the bovine eye wore a look of troubled wonderment, while one could mark an evil grin beneath the twitching nose of his antagonist, and his bleat had changed to a tone which recalled the pointing finger and unwritable "H'nh-ha!" that greets misfortune in childhood. "I told you so!" it said. The bull, however, is an animal not easily discouraged. Once more he lowered his foolish head and braved forth like a locomotive.

But it would take too long to tell all the things Billy Buck did to that bull. He simply walked all over him and jabbed and raked and poked. Away went the bull, his erstwhile proudly erect tail slewed sideways in token of struck colors, a sign of surrender disregarded by his enemy, who thought the giving of signals to cease fighting a prerogative of his office. Away went the old cows and the work steers and the horses in a thundering circuit of the corral, the horned stock bawling in terror and Billy Buck "boosting" every one of them impartially. We cheered him.

"Gad, I'm glad I didn't slit his windpipe!" said Steve. "He's a corker!"

Billy drove his circus parade around about six times before his proud soul was satisfied. Then he took the center of the ring and bellowed a chant of victory in a fuller voice than he had given before, while the other brutes, gathered by the fence, looked at him in stupefaction.

Only once more did Billy Buck figure in history before he left us for a larger field in town, and on this occasion, for the first and last time in his career, he got the worst of it.

A lone Injun came to the ranch, a very tall, grave man, clad in comic picture clothes. A battered high hat surmounted his block of midnight hair, and a cutaway coat built for a man much smaller around the chest held his torso in bondage. As it was warm on the day he arrived, he had discarded his trousers. A breech clout was plenty leg gear, he thought. He bore a letter of recommendation from a white friend.

"Plenty good letter," said he as he handed the missive over. I read it aloud for the benefit of the assembled ranch.

It ran:

This is Jimmy-Hit-the-Bottle, the worst specimen of a bad tribe. He will steal anything he can lift. If he knew there was such a thing as a cemetery, he'd walk fifty miles to rob it. Any citizen wishing to do his country a service will kindly hit him on the head with an ax.

JACK FORSYTHE.

"Plenty good letter!" cried the Injun, his face beaming with pride.

I coughed and said it was indeed vigorous. Steve and the boys fled the scene. Now, we knew that Jimmy was a good Injun or he wouldn't have had any letter at all. That great grave face, coupling the seriousness of childhood and of philosophy, simply offered an irresistible temptation to the writer of the letter. There was something pathetic in the way the gigantic savage folded up his treasure and replaced it in his coat. I think Forsythe would have weakened had he seen it. Still, after we laughed, we felt all the better disposed toward Jimmy, so I don't know but it was a good form of introduction, after all. Jimmy was looking for work, a subject of research not general to the Injun, but by no means so rare as his detractors would make out. He got it. The job was to clean out Billy Buck's corral. Steve found employment for the hands close to home for the day, that no one should miss the result. It is always business first on the ranch, and a practical joke takes precedence over other labors. Steve hung around the corral, where he could peek through the chinks. Hoarse whispers inquiring, "Anything up yet?" were for so long answered in the negative that it seemed the day had been in vain. At last the welcome shout rang out: "Injun and deer fight! Everybody run!" We flew, breathless with anticipatory chuckles. We landed on top of the shed to witness an inspiring scene—one long legged, six foot and a half Injun, suitably attired in a plug hat, cutaway coat, breech clout and moccasins, grappling in mortal combat a large and very angry deer.

Splendid was the exhibition of strength and agility we looked upon;

He outdid the wildest of our pitching horses for a half minute.

but, alas, its poetry was ripped up the back by the cutaway coat, the plug hat and the unrelated effect of those long, bare red legs twinkling beneath.

Indirectly it was the plug hat that ended the battle. At first if Jimmy-Hit-the-Bottle felt any emotion, whether joy, resentment, terror or anything man can feel, his face did not show it. One of the strangest features of the show was that immaculately calm face suddenly appearing through the dust clouds, unconscious of storm and stress.

At last, however, a yank of the deer's head—Jimmy had him by the horns—caused the plug hat to snap off, and the next second the deer's sharp foot went through it. You will remember Achilles did not get excited until his helmet touched the dust. Well, from what the cold, pale light of fact shows of the size and prowess of those ancient swaggerers, Jimmy-Hit-the-Bottle could have picked Achilles up by his vulnerable heel and bumped his brains out against a tree, and this without strain, so when the pride of his life, his precious plug hat, was thus maltreated his rage was vast in proportion.

His eyes shot streaks of black lightning. He twisted the deer's head sideways and with a leap landed on his back. Once there he seized an ear between his strong teeth and shut down. We rose to our feet and yelled. It was wonderful, but chaotic. I would defy a moving picture camera to resolve that tornado into its elements of deer and Injun. We were conscious of curious illusions, such as a deer with a dozen heads growing out of all parts of a body as spherical as this our earth, and an Injun with legs that vetoed all laws of gravitation and anatomy.

Poor Billy Buck! He outdid the wildest of our pitching horses for a half minute, but the two hundred and odd pounds he had on his back told. He couldn't hold the gait. Jimmy wrapped those long legs around him, the deer's tail in one hand, the horn in the other and the ear between his teeth, and waited in grim determination. "Me-ah-a-aaa!" said the deer, dropping to his knees.

Jimmy got off him. Billy picked himself up and scampered to the other end of the corral, shaking his head.

The Injun straightened himself up, making an effort to draw a veil of modesty over the pride that shone in his eyes.

"H-nh!" he said. "Foot deer tackle Tatonka-Sutah!" ("Tatonka-Sutah," or Strong Bull, was the more poetic title of Jimmy-Hit-the-Bottle among his own kind.)

He then gravely punched his plug hat into some kind of shape and resumed his work.

We pitched in and bought Jimmy a shiny new plug hat, which will lead me far afield if I don't drop the subject.

Well, he was master of Mr. Billy Buck. When he entered the corral the deer stepped rapidly up to the farther corner and stayed there.

Now came the broadening of Billy's career. A certain man in our nearest town kept a hotel near the railroad depot. For the benefit of the passengers who had to stop there a half hour for meals and recreation this man had a sort of menagerie of the animals natural to the country. There were a bear, a mountain lion, several coyotes, swifts, antelope, deer and a big timber wolf, all in a wire net inclosed park.

It so happened that Steve met Mr. D., the hotel proprietor, on one of his trips to town and told him what a splendid deer he had out at the ranch. Mr. D. became instantly possessed of a desire to own the marvel, and a bargain was concluded on the spot. Billy by this time had shed his horns and was all that could be wished for in the way of amiability. We tied his legs together and shipped him to town in a wagon.

Steve did not trick Mr. D. He told him plainly that the deer was a dangerous customer and that to be careful was to retain a whole skin, but the hotel proprietor, a little fat, pompous man, with a big bass voice—the kind of a man who could have made the world in three days and rested from the fourth to the seventh inclusive had it been necessary—thought he knew something of the deer character.

"That beautiful creature, with its mild eyes and humble mien, hurt any one? Nonsense!"

So he had a fine collar made for Billy, with his name on a silver plate, and then led him around town at the end of a chain, being a vain little man who liked to attract attention by any available means. All worked well until the next fall. Mr. D. was lulled into false security by the docility of his pet and allowed him the freedom of the city regardless of protest.

Then came the spectacular end of Billy's easy life. It occurred on another warm autumn day. The passengers of the noon train from the east were assembled in the hotel dining room, putting away supplies as fast as possible, the train being late. The room was crowded, the waiters rushing, Mr. D. swelling with importance. Billy entered the room unnoticed in the general hurry. A negro waiter passed him, holding two loaded trays. Perhaps he brushed against Billy; perhaps Billy didn't even need a provocation. At any rate as the waiter started down the room Billy smote him from behind, and dinner was served!

When the two tray loads of hot coffee, potatoes, soup, chicken and the rest of the bill of fare landed all over the nearest table of guests there was a commotion. Men leaped to their feet, with words that showed they were no gentlemen, making frantic efforts to wipe away the scalding liquids trickling over them. The ladies shrieked and were tearful over the ruin of their pretty gowns.

Mr. D. on the spot instantly quieted his guests as best he could on the one hand and berated the waiter for a clumsy, clubfooted baboon on the other. Explanation was difficult if not impossible. Arms flew, hard words flew, the male guests were not backward in adding their say. Then, even as I had been before, the colored man was vindicated.

Suddenly two women and a man sprang on top of the table and yelled for help. Mr. D. looked upon them open mouthed. The three on top of the table clutched one another and howled in unison. Mr. D.'s eye fell on Billy, crest up, warlike in demeanor, and also on a well dressed man backing rapidly under the table.

A flash of understanding illumined Mr. D. The deer evidently felt a little playful, but it would never do under the circumstances. "Come here, sir!" he commanded. Billy only lived to obey such a command, as I have shown. But this time Mr. D. recognized a difference and went about like a crack yacht. He had intentions of reaching the door. Billy cut off retreat. Mr. D. thought of the well dressed man and dived under the table. Those who had stood uncertain, seeing this line of action taken by one who knew the customs of the country promptly imitated him. The passengers of the eastern express were ensconced under the tables, with the exception of a handful who had preferred getting on top of them.

Outside three cow punchers who chanced to be riding by were perfectly astonished by the noises that came from that hotel. They dismounted and investigated. When they saw the feet projecting from beneath the cloths and the groups in statuesque poses above they concluded not to interfere, although strongly urged by the victims.

"You are cowards!" cried the man with the two women. The punchers joyfully acquiesced and said, "Sick 'em, boy!" to the deer.

Meanwhile the express and the United States mail were waiting. The conductor, watch in hand, strode up and down the platform.

"What do you suppose they're doing over there?" he asked his brakeman.

The brakeman shrugged his shoulders. "Ask them punchers," he replied.

The conductor lifted his voice. "What's the matter?" he called.

"Oh, come and see! Come and see!" said the punchers. "It's too good to tell!"

The conductor shut his watch with a snap. "Five minutes late," he said. "Pete, go and hustle them people over here. I start in three minutes by the watch."

"Sure," said Pete and slouched across. Pete was surprised at the sight that met his gaze, but orders were orders. He walked up and kicked Billy, at the same time shouting: "All aboard for the west! Git a wiggle on yer!"

The man owed his life to the fact that the deer could get no foothold on the slippery hardwood floor; otherwise he would have been gored to death. As it was, Billy tried to push, and his feet shot out. Man and deer came to the floor together, the brakeman holding hard. The passengers boiled out of the hotel like a mountain torrent. The punchers, thinking that the man was in danger, sprang through the windows and tied the deer. Pete gasped his thanks and hustled out to catch his train. No one was left but Billy, the punchers, the waiters and Mr. D.

"This your deer?" inquired the punchers of the latter.

"It is," said Mr. D. "Take him out and hang him. Don't shoot him. Hang him!"

"All right," replied the punchers. They took Billy out and turned him loose in the deer pen.

"Reckon the old man 'll feel better about it tomorrow," they said.

And it came to pass that the old man did feel better, so Billy was spared. Perhaps if you have traveled to the west you have seen him, a noble representative of his kind. Well, this is his private history, which his looks belie.

ABOUT COUGHS

Some Reliable Local Advice

"In conducting a large drug business we naturally meet a great many people at this season of the year who suffer from coughs, colds and bronchial troubles.

"As these troubles are easily controlled if the right means is taken to cure them, we want to say to the people of Wilmington that we guarantee our cod liver preparation, Vinol, will cure hanging-on colds, stubborn coughs, bronchial and lung troubles quicker than any preparation we have ever sold.

"This is because Vinol containns no oil or grease to clog the system and upset the stomach, yet it does contain every one of the fifty odd medicinal curative elements actually taken from fresh cod's livers, with tonic iron added. Vinol is not a patent medicine; and you know what you are taking so without reservation we recommend Vinol to cure coughs, colds, bronchial troubles, increase the appetite, build up the rundown, tired and debilitated, and create strength and renewed vitality for the aged.

"If Vinol fails to do what we say we will refund every dollar paid for it." Robert R. Bellamy, druggist.

Note—While we are sole agents for Vinol in Wilmington, it is now on sale at the leading drug store in nearly every town and city in the country. Look for the Vinol agency in your town.

IT'S IN THE DRAFT.

The secret of the fuel-saving qualities of this Buck's hot blast heater lies in the draft construction. It is so made as to allow large quantities of heated air to pass over the upper surface of the burning coal, thus supplying oxygen to the rising gasses, which are then converted into heating power.

Simple, isn't it? And yet it's new principle in stove building—not to be found elsewhere.

This stove will reduce your coal bill nearly one-third.

Let us tell your of its many advantages.

YALE TRIUMPHED OVER HARVARD

Great Foot Ball Game at New Haven Won By Score 6 to 0.

SPECTACULAR PLAYS MANY

Crimson Went Down to Defeat in Desperate Battle—Yale Undisputed Champions of America—Other Contests Over Pigskin.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24.—Yale's bright blue banners waved triumphantly over the city to-night, the signal of another magnificent victory of her team over her worthy rival, Harvard, the final score being 6 to 0. The Crimson went down to defeat in a desperate battle which in football strategy and spectacular plays has had few equals since the two universities have met. To Yale passed the almost undisputed title of the college championship of the country, clouded only by the drawn, no score contest at Princeton a week ago. Yale won to-day through greater football knowledge, superior team play, almost untiring accuracy in developing the possibilities of the new rules and the magnificent work of individual players.

Harvard proved a foeman worthy of Yale. Her men repeatedly shone conspicuously and the flashes of brilliancy in individual plays, as time and again her backs broke through the line of blue on her stalwart guard, Burr, sent the ball twisting through the air for long gains, seems to be entitled to a reward.

Harvard was a trifle slow in executing her plays, which as last year, seemed to hinge on her great strength of defense, while Yale was quick on everything. Her men were active and fierce. Yale's success lay in playing offensively at every opportunity, driving her plays hard and taking advantage of every opening when he opponents had the ball. Interference for the runner, the forward and behind the line passes, the onside kicks were a well devoloped art. Not once did a Yale man have to run down the field without assistance. As the game was nearing its close Yale played faster and rolled the Crimson line into a heap time and again. It was only Harvard's stubborn contest of every inch of her own ground that kept the score at the single figures.

The touchdown was brought about by a sensational play. Yale had the ball on Harvard's 25 yard line. Jones called his signals for a kicking formation. Veeder dropped to the 34 yard line with his hands outspread. A perfect pass from Hockenberger sent the ball into his hands and Veeder like a flash started at right angles and hurled the ball over the head's of Harvard's men for a 30-yard pass to where several Yale men as though drawn by a magnet, had jumped into one little knot. Up from their midst leaped Forbes who caught the ball and in an instant placed it down on the four yard line. Up rose the Yale hosts, with cries for a touchdown, while the Crimson side was hushed. Rome, who had replaced Knox, was sent to smash the Crimson line. His first try gave two yards and the next time he was shot over with the whole team dragging and pushing him. That four yards showed what Yale could do when she was hungry for the score which was so close at hand. The kicking of the goal was an easy thing for Veeder.

With the score 6 to 0, Harvard was compelled to change her style of attack, and Burr was called upon to put the ball out of danger with his toe. The first part of the second half resolved itself into a punting duel between Burr and Veeder. From then on the outcome seemed certain. Yale, with new players put fresh life into her team and in the last five minutes of the last half there was a march down the field. This began with Foster's fumble which Forbes took advantage of. From then on it was a case of smashing into the Harvard line until Park replaced by Frazier, showed that Yale had found the weak place. Rush after rush swept the Harvard team back foot by foot, until the ball rested on her 15 yard line. Yale was moving like a battering ram and another touchdown, apparently was prevented by the referee's whistle, ending the game.

At the close of the game, the remarkable scene was witnessed of the jubilant Yale host standing bareheaded for fifteen minutes in front of the Harvard stand alternately cheering and singing to the crimson, and the latter in turn responding in a like manner. Yale has always cheered Harvard but never before has she turned into an ovation, an incident which will temper the harsh feeling which seemed to have been aroused by reports of acrimony in the secetion of the game officials.

Midshipmen had Hard Foe.

Annapolis, Md., Nov., 24.—A score of 5 to 0 in favor of the midshipmen in the game today with the Virginia Polytechnic Institute football team proved a disappointment to naval academy supporters. The visitors did not develop any surprising strength, but the midshipmen were unable to score on them during the second half and only managed to cross their goal late in the first half.

AMERICAN LABOR AND ITS DEMANDS

Federation at Minneapalis Declares for Woman Suffrage Co-Equal With Men

COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Free Text Books in Schools—Municipal Ownership of Public Utilities—Government Ownership of Telephone and Telegraph.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 24.—Samuel Gompers was to-day re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor for the twenty-fifth time in the 26 years the Federation has been in existence. There was no opposing candidate.

Endorsement for Gompers means endorsement for his policy and the men who had worked with him framing and executing it. The entire executive and administrative staff was re-elected by acclamation. Action was taken on the proposed declaration of principles drawn up for the Federation by the resolutions committee. This is the declaration:

"In furtherance of our claim, namely that our principles comprise the fullest and highest scope of human activity and from time to time will be enhanced and advanced in accordance with the demands to satisfy human needs and desires, we recommend the following as a partial statement at this time of the economic demands of the American Federation of Labor.

Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.

Abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude except for punishment of crime.

Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of the injunction process in labor disputes.

A work day of not more than eight hours in the 24 hour day.

A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all Federal, State or municipal work and at not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.

Release from employ one day in seven.

The abolition of the contract system on public work.

The municipal ownership of public utilities.

The abolition of the sweat shop system.

Sanitary inspection of factories, workshops, mines and homes.

Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.

Nationalization of telegraph or telephone.

The passage of anti-child labor laws in States where they do not exist.

Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.

Initiative, referendum, imperative mandate and right.

We favor a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the government with such regulation and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

The Adams Express office and the railroad station at Kayford, 36 miles from Charleston, W. Va., on the Cabin Creek branch of the Chesapeake & Ohio, was looted and burned by robbers early yesterday. Of $6,000 secured, more than $5,000 belonged to C. V. Boxley a railroad contractor and was for yesterday's payroll. Agent V. E. Adams was found bound and with a bullet wound in his leg. He says he fired and was wounded in return and was beaten over the head when he tried to give the alarm.

BLOODY RIOT IN CANADA CITY

Striking Street Car Men Had to Be Dispersed By Cavalry.

ONE HUNDRED WERE INJURED

Mob Derailed and Literally Tore Street Cars to Pieces—Patrol and Soldiers Charged With Fixed Bayonets.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 24.—Never in Hamilton's history were such scenes of disorder and lawlessness seen as were enacted in the principal streets of the city to-night. Scores of rioters, sympathizers with the striking street car men, felt the weight of policemen's sticks and the keen edge of the soldiers' swords. Aa a late hour street acrs were running at intervals under heavy guards but they did not carry passengers and continued to be targets for fusillades of stones and bricks from the side streets and alleyways.

Drastic as were the measures taken by the authorities to-night it was plain that the mob spirit had not been broken. Attacks on the street cars began as early as 7 o'clock. The police used their clubs freely but the situation grew too difficult for them to handle. Sheriff Middleton was notified and he read the riot act, which makes every able-bodied citizen amenable to police duty. He also notified Capt. Ogilvie that the aid of troops had become necessary to maintain order.

At 8 o'clock a concerted effort was made by the police and soldiers to clear the streets. James street in the vicinity of city hall was packed with a dense crowd and the police charged this crowd right and left. With their heavy night sticks they waded into the crowd. Men and women suffered alike. The mob realizing that the police meant business, began to retaliate with stones and other missiles. At this point, the clatter of horses' hoofs on the pavement announced the approach of the cavalry and the crowd attacked from both simes, broke and fled down side streets and alleys. The streets in the vicinity of the city hall were cleared but it was only temporary relief for the authorities. The crowd soon began to converge on King street. A street car with detectives on board became the target for a fusillade of bricks and stones.

They were followed by a section of the crowd and given a severe beating. The street car was derailed and literally torn to pieces before the militia could reach the spot.

The mob melted away as the soldiers charged down the street with fixed bayonets.

This was the last concentrated demonstration made by the rioters during the firing, although disorders on a smaller scale were frequent up to midnight.

Twenty of the rioters were arrested and landed at the police stations. The policemen arrested scores but the crowd took the prisoners away from them before they could get to a patrol box.

Nearly 100 people were treated at the hospitals. Their injuries were not serious. They had been hit by clubs

DEADLY AUTOMOBILE RACES.

One Killed and Eight Injured in Philadelphia.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Philadelphia, Nov., 24.—Seven persons were injured, two seriously, today at the automobile races for the Quaker City Motor Club cup, at Point Brees, in the southern section of this city. The injured were all spectators and the most seriously hurt are F. E. Hubbs, and F. E. Furlow, both of Philadelphia, who sustained fractures of the legs.

During a fifty mile race, the steering gear of a sixty-horse power car became disarranged and the machine crashed through a rail behind which a large number of spectators were standing. Seven of the spectators were caught by the onrushing automobile and knocked to the ground. The machine was driven by Phill Kirk, who was accompanied by Edward Barrett, a machinist, both of this city. They were thrown from the machine and were slightly hurt.

Earnest Kesler, of New York, was killed on the same track yesterday, and Henry Lutton, his machinist, was badly injured in a collision while testing racing cars for today's races.

Important Announcement.

To have the largest stock of goods in any line, from which customers may select and from which to supply customers is a fortunate condition for any firm. The distinction of having the "largest stock" is often claimed by several rival stores in the same line.

Realizing the importance of having the largest stock of Furniture and house furnishings in Wilmington, it has been claimed by different ones. On June the first, according to the sworn tax returns, we have more than twice as many goods as any furniture store in the city, else those with the largest stock falsified tax returns under oath, depriving every branch of government from the school child to the old soldier.

The records of the transportation companies show that since June 1st we have received twice as many goods as any furniture store in the city.

To be able to save purchasers money is so important a matter that almost every one claims that.

With our facilities for buying in large quantities, saving freight, paying cash, saving discounts, economical management, certainly puts us to the place. Our goods cost us from 20 per cent to 35 per cent less than if we bought differently. We sell goods on an average of 25 per cent less than we could if we bought in the usual way.

Special Sale.

Our buyer has just returned from the Market where he bought large quantities of Holiday Goods. We have decided to have special sales days, on which we will sell these goods very cheap. Watch this space for Special announcements.
